The mingling of the new with the old created a visible atmosphere of contrast.

We encountered the familiar drudgery of classwork in temporarily unfamiliar settings.

Shiny new floor tiles formed checkerboard patterns beside their dull-colored predecessors.

The addition to the school building and new classroom facilities widened our opportunities for learning, but how much we learned depended on a little luck and individual incentive.

ACTIVITIES

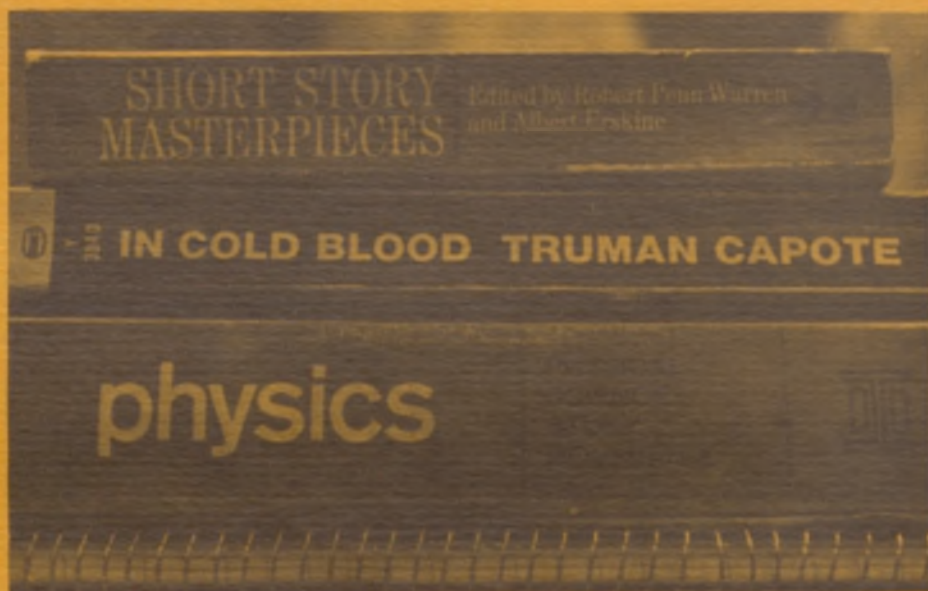

CONEDERA

For the first time seniors may choose between studying in the library or relaxing in the bus foyer.

Peggy McCormick makes use of the spacious library to do Latin homework.

As summer ends, books replace construction tools in busy halls.

Distinguished community members and school representatives participate in the Dedication Ceremony.

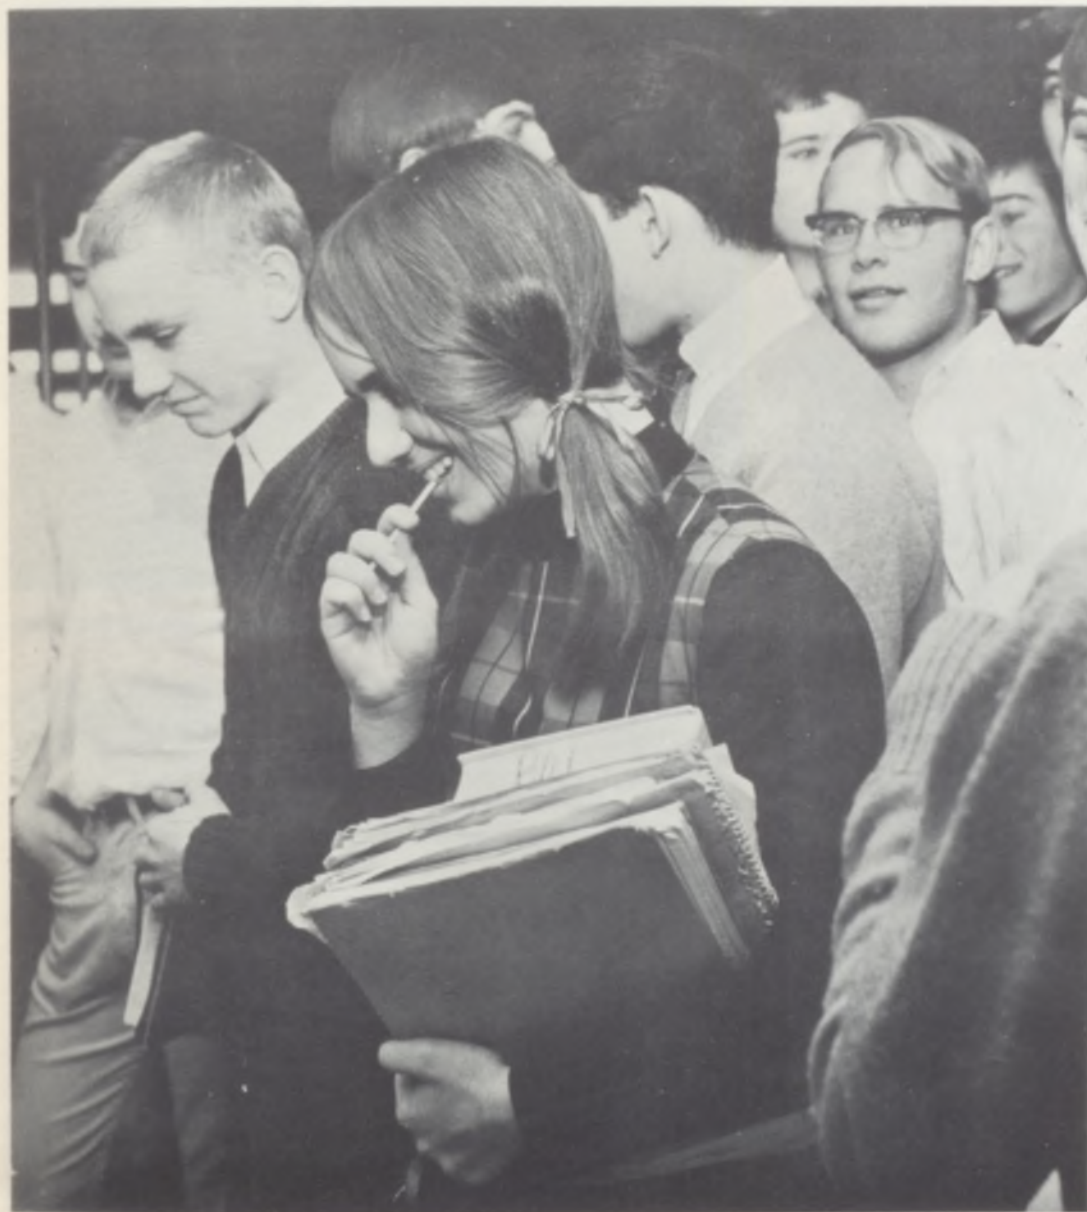

Nursery school courtyard doubles as study area for Lorel Simons.

New Addition Dedicated In Formal Ceremony

Junior girls turned their annual Big Sister-Little Sister Tea into a dinner this year, with each big sister supplying a meal for herself and her freshman little sister. "A Day at DHS," a short skit featuring hula-hoopers and the "Munch a Bunch for Lunch" group, introduced the freshman girls to a light side of Deerfield.

The fall sports season opened the following Friday afternoon at the first spirit gathering of the year. At Saturday's kick-off game, the Warriors were cheered on to a victory over Forest View. "Warrior Blitz," the Saturday evening dance decorated with favorite comic strip heroes, was a fitting close to a successful weekend.

By early November, the new facilities were near enough completion to be formally dedicated. The ceremony involved both representatives of the school district and a guest speaker, with music provided by the Deerfield Concert Band and A Cappella Choir. An informal tour through the building followed the ceremony.

Construction attracts attention as each step brings DHS nearer to completion.

Spirits, Balloons, Elephant Encourage Warriors

The spirit that abounded during Warrior Weekend was generated at the Friday night celebration. Warrior balloons, a flashing electric sign and an original cheer combined to win the Spirit Jug for the junior class. After a winding snake dance to the bonfire, the Homecoming court was announced. A coke dance climaxed the evening of celebration, and the crowd dispersed early enough to allow time for finishing touches on the preparations for Saturday.

Although the day of the Warrior Homecoming dawned bright and clear, the weather was not a true forecast of things to come. During the preparation for the third annual Homecoming parade, the highly inflammable sophomore float caught a spark and burned to the ground in spite of joined efforts to quench the flames.

Losing the varsity Homecoming game to Maine West dampened spirits, but the sophomores did not lose their sense of humor. They drew cheers with a substitute for their lost float, a sign proclaiming "We Burned 'em Down!" A halftime performance by the marching Warriors and the coronation of the Homecoming Queen highlighted the afternoon.

In the evening, "The Goal Rush" brought the Homecoming festivities to a memorable close. The queen carried out her reign in a '49ers motif while alumni and students danced to the music of "The Reasons Why."

Randy Berning announces the Homecoming Queen.

Varsity cheerleaders watch the halftime float parade as the marching Warriors perform a diamond drill

An original cheer and Warrior balloons win the Spirit Jug for the juniors.

Warrior defense anticipates a crucial third down.

Pattern drills executed by the Deerfield Marching Warriors entertain spectators at halftime.

Seniors win the float competition with their pink-toed elephant saying "We Nose We're Gonna Win."

"Kick Maine West" puns the freshman float showing Maine en route to goal posts labeled California.

Roaring with laughter over nothing, seniors mimic their audience.

Dry beds in the morning call for a celebration among five proud babies.

"Coin-Coin," senior girls' kick-line, adds a Parisian flavor to the performance.

Stunts '67 Satirizes People Passing the Buck

Money, a dominant concern in everyone's life, furnished a theme for this year's senior class-sponsored Student Stunts, "A Taste of Money." Princes and paupers, old women and new-born babies, the ugly and the beautiful and their connections with cash were represented in twenty-four skits.

Routines comprising the two acts were tied together with the aid of the Stunts band. An original overture, written expressly for Stunts '67, set the pace for the action that followed. Throughout the show, individual numbers were supported by the band.

With every year of added talent and experience, Stunts has expanded to encompass the diversity of the entire student body. This year, comedy ranged from slapstick to pantomime; and was highlighted by the boys' kickline, inspired by the traditional senior girls' line. Folk songs and a parody on a popular hit provided musical variety. In addition, the performances were enhanced by original choreography and set design.

In an enchanted forest setting, Jeff McDonald spins a tale of simple treasures.

A song of Illinois rivers, sung by Win Stracke, entertains students at the second assembly.

Mr. Alleman demonstrates the intricacies of making television commercials.

Debbie Wentworth
Snowball Queen

A Cappella and junior A Cappella choirs join voices for Poulenc's "Gloria" at the Christmas Concert.

To inform students, Steve Waldman reads notices over the PA system.

Light Snow, Much Activity Characterize Winter

Snow was rare and the winter mild while students busied themselves in a wide assortment of activities. At "Mittens and Muffs," the turnabout dance, couples were entertained by Freddy and the Extensions. A skating pond and sweet shop enhanced the ski chalet flavor of this winter dance.

Combined choruses and the orchestra performed a medley of carols and other holiday pieces at the Christmas Concert. Mrs. Henschen, a private voice teacher, joined them in "Gloria" and "Hallelujah Chorus."

The following week, Mr. Alleman, DHS speech teacher, presented the first of a series of assemblies. His lectures and four short films captured the attention of his audience as he explained the planning and production of television commercials. Folksinger Win Stracke celebrated Illinois' Sesquicentennial at the second assembly. Incorporating fact with humor, Mr. Stracke related frontier history and sang songs of those times.

As a high point of the winter sports season, NHS sponsored a faculty-senior boys basketball game. Both sides supplied skilled teams, enthusiastic cheerleaders and corrupt referees. Despite the efforts of a colorful faculty team, the seniors won the game.

Leslie Davis, Kent Smalter and Mitch Turbov aid faculty team captain Mr. Alleman in leading a cheer.

Blocking Mr. Eichstaedt during the NHS senior-faculty basketball game is one objective that Jeff McDonald misses.

AFS, Rotary Club Involve Seven in Exchanges

Deerfield participated in the Rotary Student Exchange of Rotary Clubs International for the first time this year. Anne Fish left Deerfield to spend a year in Sweden, while Karina Rosenborg and Lenie Herrema came to DHS from Sweden and the Netherlands respectively.

To complete this international group came AFS-sponsored students: Nick Glen from Swaziland, Deniz Taner from Turkey and Guisela "Cheche" Araya from Chile. AFS was nothing new to Deerfield students who had helped "Share the Fare" by buying tags and taffy apples for several years.

International understanding was fostered by living and working with students from the four corners of the globe. Each exchange student was carefully chosen by his sponsoring groups in order to find students who would most benefit from such an experience. Essays, questionnaires, exams and conferences led finally to departures by land, air and sea from familiar homelands to distant continents. Upon arrival in their temporarily adopted countries, all six exchange students first toured a large city.

Ann explored Stockholm and the visitors to America spent some time in New York. After the school year was over, a more comprehensive bus tour was in store for these international guests.

The "Old Devil Moon" puts sparkle in Sharon's, in reality Leslie Baird's, eyes according to Woody, who is played by Randy Dahlberg.

During rehearsal, Mr. Alleman pauses a moment before continuing his directions.

Bob Wainess as Buzz Collins extolls his own virtues to Senator Rawkin's, played by Tim Evans.

Glocca Morra is the subject of Ann Levi's query as she portrays Sharon McLonergan.

Gold Stirs Up Excitement In Rainbow Valley

On Saint Patrick's Day weekend, two months of work by students and faculty members culminated in the presentation of "Finian's Rainbow." Although produced using the script and music of Harburg, Saily and Lane, staging at Deerfield was done entirely through the efforts of students and teachers.

The plot concerns Finian and his daughter Sharon, Irish immigrants who settle in Rainbow Valley, Missa-tucky, where Finian buries the crock of gold which he has stolen from a leprechaun, Og. Then complications arise. A land feud develops as do romances between Sharon and Woody, a young man of Rainbow Valley, and the leprechaun and Susan Mahoney, a deaf mute.

Besides outstanding choral and dance numbers, which included "Old Devil Moon;" "Begat," sung by the Pas-sion Pilgrim Gospelers and "Something Sort of Grandish," a leprechaun love song; there were special effects. Thunder and lightning, a leprechaun whose green color gradually faded, a cypress tree and Finian's rainbow created by students backstage enriched the enthusiastic performance of the cast.

Woody Mahoney's return, enacted by Randy Dahlberg, results in rejoicing in Rainbow Valley.

Scopes Trial Enacted With Dramatic Realism

"Inherit the Wind," by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, was this year's spring play. The play is based on the Scopes trial of the 1920's, in which the practice of teaching the theory of evolution in public schools was questioned. A school teacher is tried in the deep South in the height of summer and reporters arrive to be present for the history-making decision.

Stage Crew had extra work for this play. Rather than use the regular proscenium stage, a thrust was built out into the orchestra pit. This change in standard procedure gave the audience the sensation of actually being in the courtroom; and to increase this feeling, several characters who were to speak from among the courtroom spectators were planted amidst the audience. As a final touch of realism, the actual microphone which WGN used to cover the Scopes trial was among the props for the Deerfield production.

The townspeople are interested in hearing the case of Jamie Rigler in the part of Prosecuting Attorney Matthew Harrison Brady.

If each scene could go as well as the last one, Director Mrs. Kramsky could relax.

Addressing the jury is the climax of John DeBoice's portrayal of Henry Drummond.

As Cates and his girl-friend Rachel, Steve Tarnoff and Martha Eldredge are interviewed by Hornbeck, played by Chuck Mitchell.

Playing Baltimore newspaper reporter E. K. Hornbeck, Chuck Mitchell is an interesting sight for the cast.

'Great Race' Begins Busy Spring Schedule

Innovations kept the spring months lively. A dance to which either the boy or the girl could invite a partner, a fashion show with boys as well as girls modeling and a swimming "Walk in the Black Forest" were among the attractions.

In the early part of March, Student Council started the school chest drive with "The Great Race." Checkered flag posters encouraged students to come to this dance, which was decorated with scenes from the movie. Later that same week, author John Howard Griffin presented the third in the series of assemblies. He told his experiences in the deep South with artificially pigmented skin.

In the Girls' Club fashion show, "Spring In," men's clothing was modeled for the first time. A catered desert was also served instead of the traditional Mother-Daughter Banquet.

"A Walk in the Black Forest" was the theme of the swim show, which this year counted elves and mushrooms among its cast of characters. Drama students also entertained with their performance of "Medea."

Graduation night, some five hundred seniors marched to the strains of "Crown Imperial" to receive their diplomas. Directly following the exercises at Ravinia Park, a reception was held for both graduates and their relatives.

At the dance marking the completion of "The Great Race" Jeanne Cordell pins a boutonniere on Jim Gesler.

During an award-winning performance of "Medea," Chuck Mitchell as Jason berates Medea, played by Marcia Sanders.

Captivated by author John Howard Griffin, seniors flock to the cafeteria to question him.

Board Regulates District Policy, Education

The Board of Education and district administrators were selected by the people of the community. The faculty, curriculum and school policies were controlled by this body to insure the best education possible for the young people in District 113, including both Deerfield and Highland Park High Schools.

Some of the varied responsibilities of the Board were the correlation of curriculum between schools, introduction of new courses and decision-making on district policy. They acted with school administration, who carried out these policies and any changes. The school board was also in charge of the expansion of the schools.

Specialized administrators and their assistants aided the Board of Education. Their duties were concentrated in specific fields such as curriculum and maintenance of school grounds and buildings. Together the school board and administrators promoted maximum efficiency in the school system through the cooperative efforts of the administration, faculty, students and citizens.

Administrative Facilities, Staff Expanded

Student activities were co-ordinated with the functions of teachers and counselors and the Board of Education by the Administration. This year the Administration services were reorganized with the appointment of three assistant principals. The administrative services assistant directed all extra-curricular activities, assemblies, the school calendar and organizations. Tasks involving student guidance, including counselling, testing and scheduling were overseen by the assistant principal of Pupil Personnel Services. A third assistant was in charge of new courses, the library, the faculty and summer school. The addition of these three positions resulted in a more efficient administrative body.

The administration, in addition to carrying out its usual functions, submitted suggestions for improving the school policy to the Board of Education. With the help of this body, all school activities were harmonized.

Reference Center Grows With Student Needs

Obtaining IMC passes before school in front of the library became a familiar ritual for students wishing to read or research for term papers during their study hall periods. The newly enlarged and fully equipped Instructional Materials Center provided students with varied reference materials and a convenient, quiet place to study.

The growth of the IMC increased its capacity to two hundred thirty five. Along with tables that seated several students, individual study carrels were added. In the listening booths, students were able to hear records and tapes without disturbing others. The number of volumes was increased to twenty-three thousand. Two microfilm viewers and a microfilm copier enabled students to study material otherwise unavailable to them.

To insure the efficiency of the center, the staff was increased. Two regular librarians were always on duty to see to the processing of books. A director of instructional materials was on hand to explain new devices to the students. Student aides and paraprofessionals were also stationed in the library to help the librarians and students.

Steve Salmzman and Rick Merner study in the upper level of the library.

Group Guidance Supplies Intensive Counselling

A phrase made familiar to all students this year was Group Guidance. This activity was one of the many duties of the guidance counselors. It entailed a forty-minute period of intense informative advising.

Individual counselling was also available to students by appointment at almost any time of the day. A familiar problem among all students, curriculum planning, was often solved after a visit to the guidance office. Juniors and seniors looked to their counselors for advice on plans about the future. Vocational and college information was relayed through interviews, informal conversations and literature.

The Guidance Department, in order to give the most complete and specific aid possible to all students, provided the college view-deck, records, filmstrips and the college catalogue room. Not only was the staff prepared to help students adjust to high school, but each counselor was willing to answer the many questions about jobs, college and the future.

Visual Demonstrations Aid Self-Expression

As a continuous exercise in self-expression in both oral and written media, the four-year English program was developed. Tapes, movies and projections were united with the study of such diverse styles of literature as the biography, the short story, the novel and the newspaper to develop this faculty.

On the freshman and sophomore levels, emphasis is placed on the more mechanical skills. Slowly, expression as a whole is achieved, as is demonstrated in a polished speech or research paper.

The scope of each of the four levels was broadened considerably this year by the additions to the school. Several small discussion rooms have made possible the English workshops, featuring specific fields of interest such as political literature or the works of Shakespeare. Two spacious lecture rooms equipped with rear-screen projectors permitted team teaching of combined classes.

Each of these new devices and methods was incorporated into the curriculum to lead the student gradually toward a higher level of expression.

Computer Corps Prepares TV Broadcasts

Keeping in pace with the advancing world of mathematics, the Math Department expanded its facilities and bettered its teaching methods this year. These additions aided students both in preparing for further study and in developing practical, effective reasoning processes.

The new addition to the school brought a special math lab created for research and more advanced work. Students specializing in computer work learned more about their subject by participating in the computer corps. By operating the computer and helping prepare closed circuit TV broadcasts, they learned the mechanics of their specialty first-hand.

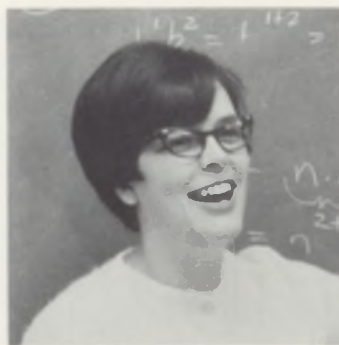

Every student at Deerfield, advanced or beginning, benefits from at least one year's training in math. Basic and modified courses provide a foundation; Matrix Algebra, Probability and Statistics, and Computer courses are offered to accomplished students. In addition, an honors course in calculus and a special survey course are available for seniors.

Greenhouse, New Labs Aid Scientists

Science courses provide more than a training ground for would-be scientists. A basic science education supplies every student with the tools for systematic problem solving and productive thinking. Because this is an area of study serving 2300 students, vast improvements were needed in methods of teaching, equipment and classroom space.

A new combination stockroom-office sandwiched between the chemistry labs enabled teachers to prepare materials conveniently ahead of time. A pure physics laboratory equipped with sophisticated electrical instruments was put to use. In the vivarium, a small greenhouse with temperature and humidity controls gave substance to the study of plant life.

For physical science, a flexible team-teaching system was launched, enabling three teachers to direct ninety students for ten periods a week. Subject matter was broken up into four groupings corresponding with different student ability levels.

To build a bridge of understanding and appreciation between aspiring scientists and future laymen citizens was a particular goal of the science department.

History Viewed First-hand Becomes Reality

History can enlighten man in order that he may profit from civilizations' past shortcomings and triumphs. However, the difference between learning from history and living in the past can be very significant. One of the goals of the Social Studies Department was to enable the student to analyze and interpret the people and events of the past and present in order to plan more fully for the future. Toward this aim, students benefited through the study of Western, Middle Eastern, Non-Western, European and American civilizations.

In addition to history, semester courses in economics, sociology, and political science were offered. These courses dealt not only with issues of national scope, but also with topics on a personal scale.

Students in every class in the department found that Social Studies is more than dry facts learned by rote. The Afro-Middle Eastern History Class visited the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago, and sampled a meal at a Lebanese restaurant. In Non-Western Civilization, slides of India and several movies were viewed. Mock trials in Political Science added realism to the investigation of civil liberties. For students of United States History the movie "Gone With the Wind" climaxed their study of the Civil War.

Humanities Enliven Studies With Performances

A jazz concert, classic and contemporary dramatic productions, field trips and individual creative projects were only a part of the new Humanities course. One hundred interested seniors were able to study in a college atmosphere, surrounded with opportunities to enrich their understanding of themselves and their world.

In addition to required outside activities, students attended two class periods a day. With the aid of movies, lectures and discussions, they surveyed in depth the literature, art, music and philosophies of civilizations from ancient times to the present. Four instructors co-ordinated their material to provide an integrated view of these normally separated areas of study.

In the new team teaching rooms, a rear-screen slide and movie projector enabled the teachers to illustrate their points effectively for the entire group. Equally important were the small discussion groups in which ideas related to the course were exchanged. Aristotle's Poetics, the social satire of Tom Jones, the political philosophy of John Locke became subjects for analysis and criticism.

Language Classes Sample Cultures Directly

Geared to a two-fold objective, the Language Department instituted changes that brought students closer to a complete understanding of languages.

During the first and second years in French, Spanish, German and Latin a solid knowledge of vocabulary and grammar was imparted to the students. Memorization, imitation and translation were methods important in this process.

In the third and fourth year courses, these skills were polished and the students learned to apply their language to study of the culture of the country. Tapes of natives speaking their own language helped the students improve their accent and timing. Movies encouraged them to understand the language directly instead of translating back to English.

Through history, culture and literature, an idea of the many aspects of a country was obtained. A visit to a Spanish restaurant, Cicero's Orations, the works of Pascal, and Goethe's Faust combined with the guidance of the teachers to provide an experience as near as possible to a trip to a foreign-speaking country.

Drawing Project Interrupts January Classes

The creative artist is a skilled technician as well as an imaginative observer. The Art Department provides training in the technical aspects of art, while guiding self-expression in a wide variety of media. This year the enlarged staff co-ordinated and intensified these two levels of training.

Though no new courses were added to the program, each course was taught by an expert in a specific field. Also, a highly experimental program was instituted for three weeks in January for all art students. Every class discontinued its normal course of study and took up drawing. According to its level of ability, each class was exposed to an intensive skill learning program. Teacher rotation was introduced into the department, providing each class with at least three individual approaches to drawing.

Specialists in commercial art, photography, jewelry and painting have made the Deerfield art staff an extremely competent guide for the developing art student. The potter's wheel, colored film strips and history books were used to aid in producing students proficient in self-expression in the fine arts.

Distributive Education Joins Business Department

Every young person is challenged by the vital and changing world of business to develop personal or vocational economic skills. The Business Education Department, anticipating a state bill that will require consumer education for all students, has broadened its range of courses to meet this demand.

An introductory business course available to freshmen and sophomores provided a foundation for future secretarial, clerical or college preparatory studies. Upperclassmen extended their training with specialized courses chosen according to their individual career plans.

In addition to three levels of typing instruction and various merchandising and secretarial courses, a distributive education program was organized. Students taking part in this co-operative effort of the school and business community carried a full load of classes every morning and received valuable on the job training in the afternoon.

Home Ec Students Explore Career Opportunities

Foods and clothing were only two of the many fields offered to home economics students. The basis for careers in architecture, magazine work, advertising and any industry directly concerning the consumer can be formed in the Home Ec classroom.

Courses range from general survey studies providing a solid background to specialized training in home planning, clothing and foods. Not everything can be learned by experience or at home, so the girls must study and use textbooks as in any course. In the clothing class, for example, basics about fabrics and design and the operation and care of a sewing machine are learned before the students try applying them to a construction problem.

Keeping in mind that home economics training is not restricted to future homemakers, this year the Home Ec Department attracted career-minded girls with its ever-growing facilities.

DeVry Training Precedes Computer Program

Mechanically-minded students at Deerfield were able to benefit from either vocational or college preparatory training included in the industrial arts program. Heightened this year was the emphasis on mechanical drawing, introducing the basic skills in the field of industrial arts.

Beginning students were trained to observe objects and reproduce them accurately on paper in mechanical drawing. At the same time, they had the opportunity to take metal shop, power mechanics, woodshop or electricity and electronics. Both operating skills and understanding of tools and systems were stressed.

The advanced courses encompassing architectural drawing and third semester woodshop called for previous industrial arts experience and a strong mathematics background. Frequent demonstrations and the DeVry electronic approach to computer service and repair.

To master industrial theory and manual skill was the aim of the Industrial Arts Department. Movies were shown and engine models demonstrated and dissembled to keep pace with this year's more technologically oriented program.

Music Attracts Individuals Of Talent, Dedication

Appreciation, performing skill and knowledge of the mechanics of music were offered to every student who was a part of the Music Department. With the enlargement of the choral and instrumental library, the spectrum of music available to the department was broadened this year.

General chorus and beginning band provided impetus for the unskilled musician. Other courses, including reserve band, advanced chorus and orchestra, developed the students' abilities with more advanced curriculum. After one year in the department, upperclassmen qualified for the theory course and selective vocal and instrumental courses.

The enthusiasm and dedication of both students and faculty was projected outside the classroom in special school functions and performances. Athletic events and student productions were accompanied by band or the orchestra. Independent music programs were presented for the benefit of the entire school.

Music is a demanding field but can be a very rewarding one if a student is enthusiastic and diligent. The strengthening and growth of the Music Department this year focused on individual discipline.

New Gym Courses Utilize Expanded Facilities

Health, enjoyment and expression through movement are the products of an effective physical education program. The already large span of physical activities available for Deerfield students was broadened with a larger staff, more gym and locker room area, a dance studio and a new health room.

Swimming and team sports were open to both boys and girls. A wheel chair gym class was adopted this year for disabled students. Additions to the girls' gym curriculum included fencing and ball gymnastics. Everything from weight-lifting to relaxation was enjoyed.

Both the boys' and girls' physical education departments expanded their popular intramural programs. Participants had a chance to let off steam after a grinding day at school and to excel in sports that particularly interested them.

The daily physical education classes, in conjunction with the intramural program, work toward creating a sense of good sportsmanship and healthy energy in all Deerfield students.

Comprehensive Curriculum Fosters Safe Driving

Ever-growing needs for a sound high school driver education program must be met with improvements both in the classroom and behind the wheel. For the first time, traffic safety education was offered at Deerfield this year on a semester basis. Classroom, simulator, range and on the street training were integrated into an intensive skill-training program.

A new simulator prepared each student for the perils of the road, while four full time instructors distilled efficient, courteous driving habits. On the driving range students continued practicing the techniques introduced in the simulator, the final test of their training coming on traffic-filled streets.

To skill must be added the proper attitude toward safe driving. Films and diagrams helped arouse concern over the mayhem on the highways. With these aids, students became aware of their individual roles in reducing accident rates and promoting enjoyable driving.

Enlarged Staff Offers Aid On Individual Level

ATTENDANCE OFFICE STAFF--Mrs. Dottie Hall, Mrs. Carrie Romcevich.

The professionals and staff of Deerfield's office, cafeteria, custodial and nursing personnel are all essential to the running of an efficient, attractive school.

The office staff keeps all student records as well as helping teachers with the reproduction of tests. They also have duties involving school programs, PTO and referendum information.

Another aid to teachers and students this year was the increased staff of para-professionals. Their stations in the library, study halls, science labs and office increased the efficiency of these areas and offered guidance to students.

The health of students and teachers was looked after by certified nurses and the cafeteria personnel. The nurses were prepared to handle any accident or illness, and the cafeteria provided nourishing luncheons and a la carte items.

The locker room attendants and custodians kept the school and landscape well cared for and smoothly-running. The construction this year made this an especially vigorous task.

Student-Faculty Relations Bettered by Council

From the first day of school in the fall, Student Council executive board worked to co-ordinate school activities. Teachers new to Deerfield were grateful for the welcome they received from Student Council. Although the new addition to the school heightened the first-day confusion students were quickly oriented with the help of council hall guides.

After the choosing of administrative group representatives, the organization began planning many activities. The kick-off dance, Warrior Weekend, School Chest, coat Checks and student exchanges with near-by schools are the traditional responsibilities of Student Council.

A serious effort to improve cooperation between the student body, the faculty and the administration was undertaken this year with the formation of a Student-Faculty Committee. Additional committees were set up to enforce rules and improve student conduct and attitudes. Student complaints and questions were also examined.

Beat Reporters Seek Out News for Deerprints

For more complete news coverage this year, DEERPRINTS, the student newspaper, initiated the beat system. Clubs, activities and academic departments were divided into beats and each week beat reporters gathered information from these sources. Possible stories were written up on beat sheets and submitted to the section editors. The most important news stories were chosen and printed in the bi-monthly issues of DEERPRINTS.

Besides reporting school and community news, DEERPRINTS printed editorial comment, humor and student artwork and photography. Exchanging newspapers with schools in the Chicago area and across the country acquainted staff members with different styles of writing and publication.

The newspaper staff included the editor-in-chief, associate, copy and section editors. Each section editor was aided by an assistant and several reporters. After the first semester, the editor-in-chief was relieved of her time-consuming responsibilities when she changed positions with news editor. Several members of the staff attended a summer workshop at Kent State University in Ohio and a journalism conference in the fall at the University of Illinois.

O*YAD Creates Portrait Of Student Life

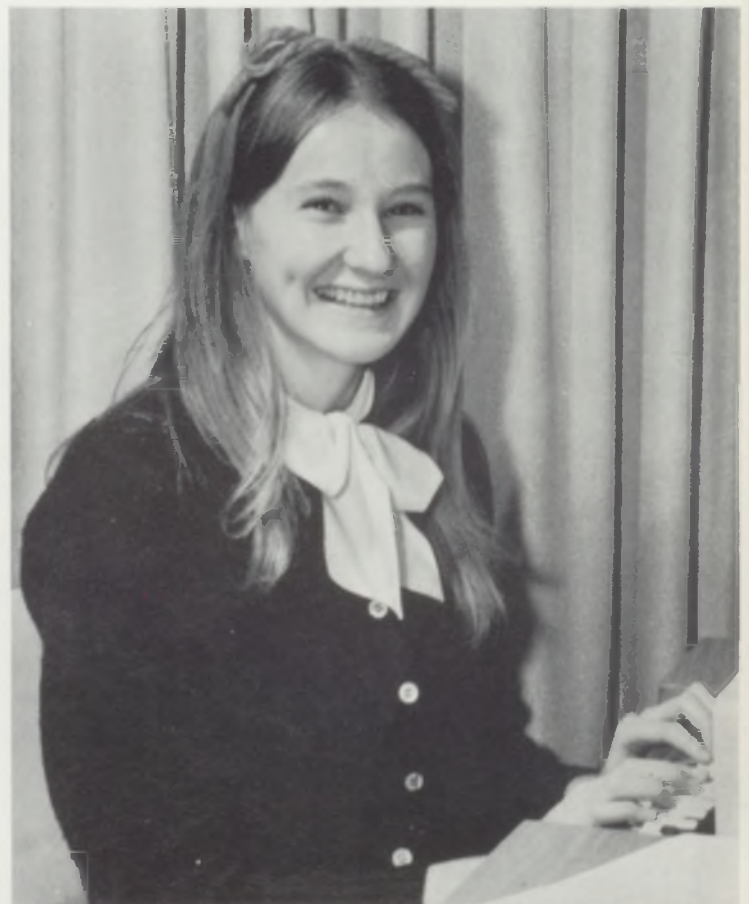

Changes both visible and behind the scenes underlaid plans for this year's O*YAD. The number of pages in the yearbook was increased to 192 in order to provide space for new courses and organizations and expanded departments. Four-page division sections of different texture and color paper from the rest of the book were included for the first time. Though the page size remained the same, originally designed mosaic layout and a different type style were chosen for the 1968 O*YAD.

Planning for O*YAD began early last spring with the selection of editor and staff. A smaller staff was chosen this year to maximize efficiency by lessening confusion. Each section editor worked with two assistants rather than coping with a larger staff for each section.

During the summer and fall, workshops and conventions were attended for high school yearbook editors at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Illinois. O*YAD editors attended these conventions upon invitation by their advisers and were given suggestions for improving organization, expression and photography.

Students Submit Works To Enlarged Troubadour

A more diversified view of student creativity headed the changes instituted for this year's TROUBADOUR, the literary magazine. Along with a new format and theme, separate staff members were appointed for poetry, short stories, humor, publicity and business.

Each piece of work submitted to TROUBADOUR was carefully screened and improvements suggested to the author. The works were then rewritten, resubmitted and possibly published.

The magazine was quadrupled in size; as a result more short stories and humor were included.

Quill and Scroll, an honorary organization of students seriously interested in journalism, was made up of fifteen students. Eligible for membership in Quill and Scroll were all juniors and seniors who were one year veterans of the DEERPRINTS or O*YAD staff. To become members, students were required to have recommendations from their advisers. Pins and membership cards were awarded to everyone included in this national organization.

Students Conduct Intiation; Scholars Honored

In the spring of 1967, five per cent of the junior class was selected to be initiated into National Honor Society. This national organization honors the achievements of high school students in leadership, scholarship, service and character.

In previous years, NHS members were chosen as seniors and were initiated by the faculty. The new policy for selection made transitions from year to year easier, since there were members in the club at all times.

The twenty-five junior members were able to become acquainted with the plans and procedures of the organization. When an additional ten percent of the class was selected in the fall, a morning ceremony to which all parents and seniors were invited was conducted by the twenty-five.

NHS gave a donation to Troubadour and raised money at the faculty-senior basketball game for scholarships.

Debaters Research, Argue Criminal Procedures

Grueling night practices prepared Debate Club members for Saturday tournaments with other schools in the Suburban Interstate League. Tournaments were held from November through April. This year's debate topic was "Resolved: that Congress should establish uniform regulations to control criminal investigation procedures." After the Saturday tournaments, awards were often presented to the highest ranking debater and team. Members debated four times each Saturday, and at sometimes had to defend both sides.

Debate Club was broken down into three levels of competition: novice for freshman, junior varsity for sophomore and junior debaters and varsity for seniors.

After the year's topic was announced, research began. Debaters collected all kinds of current information: statistics, opinions, plans, and organized their materials on notecards filled in recipe boxes. A summer debate institute at Northwestern was attended and then practice began in the fall. By criticizing each other and using the video recorder, students perfected their arguments. In the spring, debaters held a banquet honoring their outstanding members.

Video Improves, Polishes Forensic Deliveries

A new video-tape machine boosted the forensics team to one of its most successful years. Speakers were able to see and hear immediately after delivering their speeches whatever problems they needed to correct.

A larger, younger team than the previous year's and a new freshman forensics team joined in the competition with other schools. Ten areas of competition were offered: oratorical declamation, original oration, original monologue, radio speaking, extemporaneous speaking, serious reading, comedy reading, prose reading, after dinner speaking and verse reading. Through the competition, members of the forensics team gained experience in public speaking.

Students began preparing early in the fall for the series of tournaments attended from November through February. The also helped in the organization and management of Deerfield's second forensics tournament held January 27. To interest the student body in the activities of the forensics team, an assembly was presented in the spring demonstrating the various areas of speaking.

"Happening" Highlights Student Drama

A student-directed play was enacted every week by members of the Drama Club. All theatrically-minded students, whether or not they were taking drama as a course, were invited to display their stage skills every Tuesday night. Though the club was only in its second year, it boasted over one hundred members and a written constitution.

Plays such as "Medea" and "Antigone," produced by the drama class, were performed for club members. In addition to their own plays including a cutting from "Picnic" and "A Short Walk after Dinner," students created a "Happening." An original slide show set to music was presented after school. The show told a story about life in an imaginative way.

Members of Drama Club were taught methods to apply make-up and critique a play. Monologues and dialogues were practiced and performed in the group. Students also attended professional dramatic productions in conjunction with their studies.

Stage Crew Adds Sparkle To Performances

While spending long hours in preparation for school presentations, members of the Stage Crew learned the techniques of behind-the-scenes work. Lighting, set design and construction, sound and curtain operation were part of their extensive responsibilities.

Working with student performers, stage crew added a professional polish to the technical side of Stunts, "Finian's Rainbow" and "Antigone." Unusual problems were presented with the creation of the revolving door and balloon treetops for Stunts, a covered wagon for "Medea," and a specially-constructed tree for "Finian's Rainbow." Members used the backstage area and the woodshop to build sets.

During productions, students were found back-stage, in the cage, at the audio controls and in the projection booth. Stage lighting was controlled in the cage while the projection booth spotlight accented the performance. Sound effects such as rumbles of thunder and recorded music as well as the stage microphones were controlled by the audio center.

The Stage Crew also provided lighting for school dances, assemblies, concerts, the fashion show and the Homecoming bonfire.

Choruses Voice Results Of Daily Practice

Euphonious sounds of the chorus were enjoyed at many school presentations. Members of chorus performed in the spring musical, "Finian's Rainbow," the new addition dedication ceremony and graduation. The choruses also entertained the people of the community. They sang for the Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups and organizations. They put on special programs at various Deerfield junior high schools so that younger students could see how a high school chorus performed.

Not all the chorus members' work was done on stage. Much time and effort went into practicing and learning how to improve their singing. Through diligence, a member of chorus could go from chorus, to Treble Clef (girls only), to Junior A Capella and finally to the A Capella Choir.

While working, the members also gained the valuable experience of functioning with a large group. They became acquainted with various periods of music, and how music reflected the times. Working in shows, they acquired insight and knowledge in the areas of staging and producing.

Orchestra Gains Excellence By Intensive Training

"Sandpaper Ballet" and "Showboat" were among the wide variety of pieces played by the members of orchestra. Instrumentalists were daily given an opportunity to increase their own proficiency while contributing to a performing organization. Students also received special training. Everyone had private lessons, usually once a week, to improve individual instrumental tone. When preparing for a performance, orchestra was divided into smaller groups to concentrate on specific parts and work on special problems.

The best brasses, percussion and woodwinds of the band were made part of the orchestra. Together with the strings, they practiced ninth period for concerts and other special functions. Orchestra played for the National Honor Society Induction and accompanied the chorus in the "Hallelujah Chorus" and "Gloria in G Major" in the Christmas Concert. Entertaining the community at the District Festival, the Spring Concert and with "Crown Imperial" at graduation was included in the year's program. The orchestra also performed the music for "Finian's Rainbow."

Marching Warriors Enliven Home Festivities

During the seven minute half-time show in football season, the concert band played while executing drills. A wide spectrum of student talents were combined to create this musical organization. Together, they worked as a cooperative unit, gaining a wider knowledge of music and discovering music as a discipline.

Preparation for band began in the summer when several students attended band programs at Northwestern and at Interlochen. Before the opening of school, band met to practice fall music and become familiar with drills. During the fall, band marched on the field daily ninth period and after school to perfect such movements as "Little Brown Jug" and the "Diamond Drill."

Besides football game activities, band participated in the dedication ceremony, the district music festival and the spring concert. A group of selected students, Pep Band, played at basketball games, pep rallies and sports awards programs. Another group, the stage band, played for "Finian's Rainbow" and the Girls' Club Carnival.

A spiralling baton tossed high into the air could be seen at football and basketball games representing the twirlers. Working in conjunction with the band, the twirlers practiced with a private teacher and then marched to entertain students, parents and faculty.

GIMA Awards Active Girls With Gold Pins

The Girls' Intramural Association provided intramural activities after school and promoted interest in such sports as field hockey, volleyball, badminton and fencing. Dance, swim and gymnastics clubs were a part of GIMA.

GIMA operated the concession stand at football games, handled the publicity for Warrior Weekend and sponsored the turnabout dance, "Mittens and Muffs," held in December. The money GIMA earned from these activities provided scholarships for GIMA members and payed for materials, which included thirty pairs of new tights and leotards for dance, gymnastics and swim clubs.

GIMA members participated actively in sports. Every day after school girls were able to earn points toward becoming members by taking part in the planned sports. They also earned service points by working on committees and making tags and posters.

This year GIMA initiated a new system of rewarding loyal members. Girls with forty points were awarded a silver pin, while those with fifty points received a gold pin.

Spring Carnival Concludes Girls' Club Agenda

Every month a new service activity was initiated by Girls' Club. In addition to presenting the annual spring fashion show and a mother-daughter dinner in March, Girls' Club made wreaths during the holiday season and sold Homecoming mums to the student body.

Replacing the yearly magazine drive was the school calendar which contained essential information about school activities. The Big Sister-Little Sister tea became a supper this year so that freshmen girls and their junior big sisters could become better acquainted.

A newly-introduced idea in Girls Club was the point system, in which girls earned points for the work they did for the club. Models in the fashion show were required to have three service points.

A carnival in April with booths representing various clubs and sessions was another Girls' Club innovation. The usherettes were Girls' Club members that usher at school productions.

FTA, FNA Explore Careers Through Experience

Future Nurses of America gained experience in the responsibilities and rewards of helping others. FNA introduced interested girls to the possibilities of health careers as well as nursing.

Throughout the year, FNA invited speakers to acquaint members with various careers connected with nursing. Counselors from Loyola and Evanston Hospitals informed them of the courses offered at their institution. At Christmas, FNA members packed boxes of supplies under the direction of the Red Cross for soldiers in Viet Nam.

Problems and opportunities found in teaching were explored by members of the Future Teachers Association. Students in FTA took various field trips that gave them the opportunity to observe different teaching methods.

Besides learning about teaching and helping themselves decide on careers, FTA members served others. They added to the festivities of Warrior Weekend by selling cotton candy. During National Education Week, they gave the teachers a lift by presenting each one with an apple. The student tutoring program, several scholarships and a donation to a Mexican charity were other activities sponsored by FTA.

Strategy and Concentration Win in Bridge, Chess

A picture of concentration unequalled in many classrooms was encountered by visitors to Bridge Club's Tuesday night meetings. Members who were new to the game were taught the fundamental techniques, while experienced bridge-players further developed their abilities with practice. Tournaments were then held among members in preparation for tournaments with Highland Park High School. This year the officers of the Bridge Club took upon themselves the managing of tournaments.

Behind the silent, motionless expressions of Chess Club members lies the result of months of practice: concentration and strategic reasoning. A sense of good sportsmanship and the ability to reason solutions to a problem went hand-in-hand with skill in chess.

The annual school tournament in which freshmen, sophomores and junior teams were active was scheduled for December and January. In February, an interschool match with Highland Park was held at Deerfield.

AFS, German Club Foster International Spirit

Foreign students at DHS were more than supported financially by American Field Service. To form a bond of understanding between Americans and students of different countries was the prime purpose of AFS.

The club's activities included a Foreign Student Exchange with surrounding schools, coke dances, snack bar and taffy-apple days. In the fall, a weekend was devoted to AFS. The proceeds from these activities will help support next years' foreign exchange students.

Germany found its official headquarters in Deerfield every other week at the meetings of German Club. The club's purpose was to further the interest of students taking German in the country's language and people.

Activities planned included a movie from the German council and a visit to the German section of Chicago. Members viewed slides of Ludinghaussen, Deerfield's sister city in Germany and organized a pen pal program with this city. A German Christmas party and a session of German games strengthened the club's cultural bond with Germany.

Science, Math Clubs Stress Personal Approach

Renamed Pythagoras, the Math Club changed its image this year with active group participation and a bond of communication between the faculty and students. Pythagoras supplemented the mathematics curriculum at DHS with lively discussions at every meeting. Speakers were welcomed in all areas of math. This year Mr. Karl Wildermuth spoke on Boolean Algebra.

New to this year's club was the Pythagoras Problem of the week. Each week a mathematics problem in story form was posted and the solution given the following week. Its purpose was to improve the spirit and exercise the logic of the student body.

Club projects, demonstrations and student speakers attracted scientifically-minded students to the J-hall headquarters of Science Club. Taking advantage of the new laboratories and equipment, they conducted out-of-the-ordinary supervised experiments, including an examination of the electricity given off by electric eels. Many of the members engaged in research projects in their specific fields of interest.

In its first year, Camera Club invited any students interested in photography to improve their skill and share their ideas every Tuesday after school. Although students were encouraged to experiment for themselves in new fields of photography, the club served as an exchange center of ideas and suggestions and a source of instruction for beginners.

Early in the fall, a member of the Camera Club gave a talk dealing with the intricate workings of a camera. Interested members planned an exhibit of original photographs in the school lobby.

In the lower level of the Deerfield Police Station, Rifle Club members strove under the supervision of experts for better marksmanship and skill in handling rifles. Members of Rifle Club were required before actively taking part in shooting to learn all of the safety regulations for the use of firearms. All of the twenty active members had to comply with the NRA shooting qualifications. If they met these requirements, which included being able to shoot accurately from fifty feet, they were awarded different class distinctions: pro-marksmanship, marksman, marksman first class or sharpshooter. After learning the essential safety regulations, Rifle Club competed for awards from the National Rifle Association.

DECA, Key Club Serve, Work in Community

All Distributive Ed students were eligible to become members of the Distributive Education Club of America. The club provided recreation, fellowship and a chance to discuss individual on the job problems with students in similar positions.

In the spring, the members of DECA tried for entry in the State National Convention by making displays or giving talks concerning marketing. The best students from the DE class were selected to attend the convention and had a chance for a scholarship. DECA held a dinner for all DE employers in the community and each Friday morning the DECA students and their advisers went out for breakfast.

As an organization of service to the school and community, Key Club was formed in March of 1967. A high school branch of the International Kiwanis organization, the club was open to all high school boys and was made up of twenty-five members this year.

Key Club helped the Deerfield Kiwanis organization on the peanut day drive. They also held two slave days, raising money by doing outdoor work. With the profits from this venture, they gave parties for orphans at Christmas time. Members also participated in a film explaining the activities and functions of Key Club.

Timing, Teaching Involve Guard and Leaders

In its second year, Deerfield Guard enabled its members to teach swimming to children of the community. To become a Deerfield Guard member, students were required to pass a basic life saving test and be able to convey swimming skills to children. Guards were also assigned to time at all home swimming meets. Practice sessions were held early in the year to teach techniques used in teaching and timing. More experienced and enthusiastic members helped to organize the club's activities, including a winter chicken feast, a spring picnic and a May Awards Banquet.

With the desire to teach underclassmen in athletics, the Leaders of the Girls' Physical Education Department gave up free periods to assist in freshmen and sophomore classes. The girls applied and were chosen the previous spring by the department. Throughout the year they demonstrated stunts, plays and routines. Girls were also given lessons by teachers about how to teach a particular sport, and then allowed to work directly with the class. Leaders in their special red gym suits also had their own gym class to improve their skills.

New Warrior Fight Song Created, Performed

Colorful sayings posted by the Pep Club decorated cafeteria windows to announce sports events and encourage student attendance. Other clever posters and announcements in the daily notices promoted athletic activities as well as the sale of spirit buttons and bus tickets. During their Tuesday afternoon meetings, members planned red and gray days, the Homecoming parade, and the Spirit Jug, Pep Can, and Pep Paddle Contests.

Familiar sounds of the Tijuana Brass provided the music for the newly-formed Pom Pon squad. After extensive practice, they created routines to be presented at football games, basketball games and pep rallies.

Sporting gay red uniforms and new Bubbles, the varsity cheerleaders excited Warrior enthusiasm at athletic events and pep rallies. After attending cheerleading clinics, the eight girls adapted old ideas and created new yells. The lively sophomore cheerleaders spurred spirited students at other levels of athletic competition.

Art Club Projects Advance Creative Freedom

Giving students an opportunity to experiment in art outside of the classroom was the chief purpose of Art Club. One of the frustrations common to art students is the forty minute class period. Art Club allowed its members to pursue their own interests unrestricted by time limits.

The annual activity sponsored again this year by Art Club was the painting of community store windows announcing Warrior Weekend. Designs were approved by Art Club before being painted. The window paintings were judged on appearance and originality, and awarded certificates and ribbons at the Homecoming Pep Rally.

During the regular meetings Art Club members made plans to see the Picasso exhibit at the Art Institute of Chicago and discussed the possibilities of a student rental gallery. While designing and painting original Christmas cards, they experimented with the silk screen process. In February, the club aided Stage Crew and gained a new experience in art by painting a backdrop for the musical, "Finian's Rainbow."

Competitors in the window contest watch their creation evolve.

Individual Develops Through Intense Competition

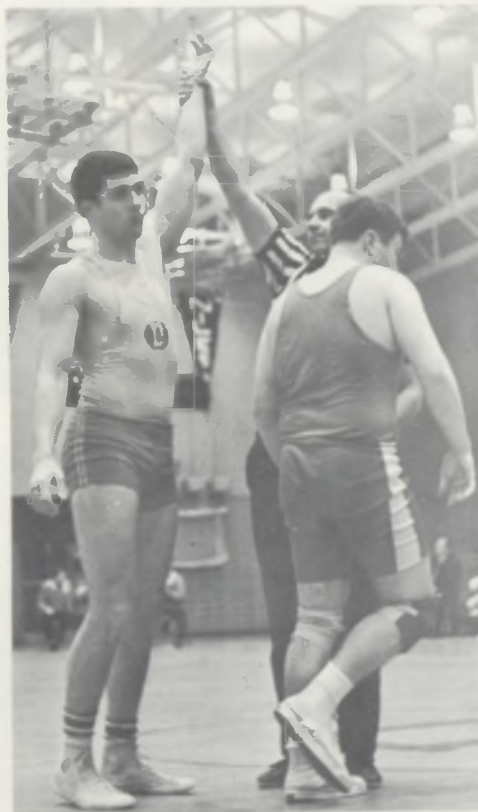

Athletics play an important part in the life of a student at Deerfield. If a student participates in a sport this part grows even larger. Tremendous sacrifices and punishment are endured by an individual so that he is prepared for the competition to be faced.

For a cross country runner it involves running countless miles, often alone, through mud, rain or cold preparing for an event which is a grueling race in itself. For a swimmer it involves year-round swimming plus enduring daily practices of over four miles to cut tenths of a second off his time. For a wrestler it involves a special type of punishment, that of denying himself food in order to maintain his weight.

It is an honor and a privilege to represent the school in competition, win or lose, but when competing the athlete's thoughts of punishment are forgotten and his sole thought is of winning. And when an athlete exerts himself to the utmost and is successful in defeating his opponent it somehow makes all the pain and punishment worthwhile.

Harriers Finish Season Fourth in League

The varsity cross country team completed its best season to date, compiling a won-lost record of 9-3. Led by co-captains Jim Gesler and Terry Globerson, the thin-clads sped to a fourth place finish in the Central Suburban League, in addition to placing a close second in the Lake County Meet and taking eighth in the Ridgewood Invitational. Gesler, who was selected most valuable runner, did an outstanding job all year, finishing second in the County Meet and sixth of 183 runners in the District Meet. Adding depth to the squad were sophomores Bob Lawrence and Rick Mittelman, whose consistently good finishes aided the Warriors.

The sophomore harriers also compiled their best record. They swept to their third consecutive County title, and narrowly missed tying for the conference championship.

Warrior Gridders Post 4-4 Season Record

Under the direction of new Head Coach Paul Adams, the Warrior gridders posted a respectable season record of 4-4. In the first four games the Warriors were truly outstanding, scoring 104 points while holding their opponents scoreless. However Deerfield's string of 17 consecutive victories was snapped by Maine South, and after that they were unable to regain their momentum. Injuries played a crucial part in the Warriors' final four games, as the loss of seven varsity players severely weakened their attack. Leading the Deerfield offense was most valuable player Marc Toma, who rushed for an average of over 98 yards per game. Until the injuries began to take their toll, the Warrior defense was rated as the best in the Chicago area. Underclassmen played an important part on the varsity, as three sophomores and eight juniors saw action during the year.

On the other levels, the junior varsity was successful in winning their third consecutive conference championship. The sophomores finished second in a close race, while the freshman team placed fourth.

Cagers' Season Marked by Inconsistency

Deerfield's varsity basketball team, seeking to repeat as Central Suburban League champions, fell short of that goal this year as the Warriors could manage only a fifth place finish. The team was able to win only 5 of 14 league contests, and finished with an overall record of 6-15.

Inexperience definitely hurt the Warriors in the early part of the season as there were few returnees from last year's team. Scott Ascher, a member of last year's squad, was out with a knee injury and never did return to top form. Henry Hakewill voted most valuable player, was the only Warrior named to the all-conference squad.

Deerfield began the season fairly well, but after a crushing loss to Maine South they went into a slump from which they were not able to recover. The Warrior season ended on an unhappy note as they lost a heart-breaking regional game to Highland Park 64-62.

The fortunes of the other level teams were better. The junior varsity team posted a 9-5 record to place them second in the conference. The sophomores tied for first place with a 12-2 record, while the freshmen finished 14-4 for third place.

DHS Varsity Swimmers Retain League Title

Despite the loss of two-thirds of last year's varsity team, the Warrior swimmers turned in another outstanding season, capturing an unprecedented fifth consecutive conference title. The only serious challenge to the Warriors' dominance came from the formidable New Trier West squad, whom they twice defeated for the title.

The only Warrior to place in the finals of the state meet was diver Jim Billipp, who finished fifth and was voted most valuable by his teammates. Other state placers included Dana Staats, John McCarthy, and the medley relay team of Wayne Spath, Dana Staats, Steve Crandall and Tim Joyce. Although Deerfield finished eleventh in the meet their performance did not equal their accomplishments of previous years.

Although the sophomore team competed without the services of their top swimmers they easily won the conference championship. The freshman swimmers also posted an undefeated dual meet record and easily won the conference meet. With the return of many underclassmen next year, the Warriors will again be in contention for the state title.

Warrior Wrestlers Fight To Seventh in State

The Deerfield varsity matmen posted another superlative season as they won the conference championship for the third straight year and placed high in state competition. Their superiority was obvious as they rolled over all dual meet opponents and ended the year with a string of 22 consecutive victories.

Through long hours of practice Coach Tom Halford molded his grapplers into top condition. Their physical prowess paid off later in the season as it brought them their second straight district championship and runner-up honors in the sectional meet. The season concluded on a high note as the Warriors, led by most valuable wrestler George Surgent and Scott Jacobs, finished seventh in the state meet. Surgent, who wrestled at 165 lbs., placed second in the meet, being defeated in the final match 6-4 in overtime. Jacobs, wrestling at 133 lbs., placed fourth in the meet.

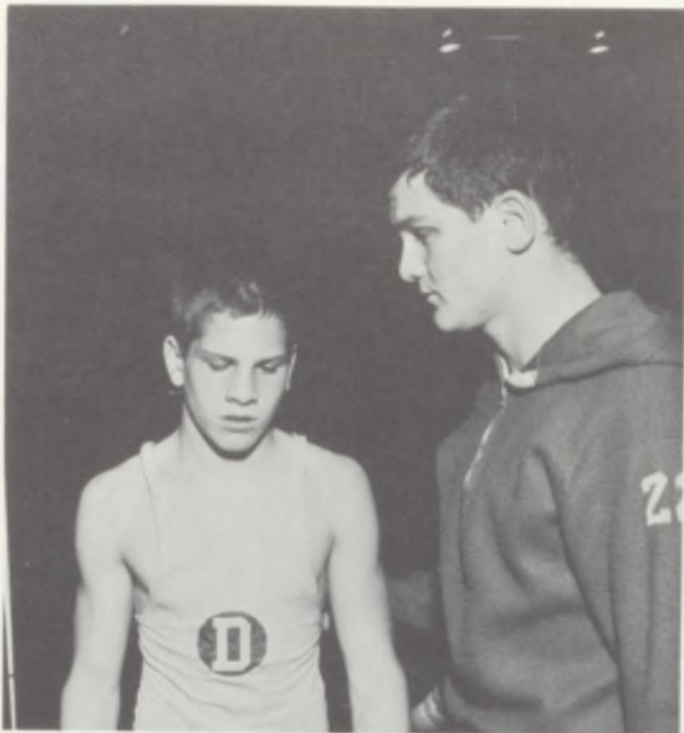

On other levels the Warriors were almost as successful, as the junior varsity team swept to its third straight conference title. The sophomores posted an 8-3 record for third place, while the freshman also captured their conference crown.

Varsity Season Highlighted By District No-Hitter

Deerfield's varsity baseball team finished the 1967 season with a 4-8 conference record. The Warriors' play was more impressive than their record indicates. They notched a 5-2 total in non-conference play, and placed second in the state district meet. En route to this second place finish they scored a remarkable 22-0 victory over Stevenson behind the no-hit pitching of Steve Stanger.

During the early part of the season weather was a problem for the Warriors, as they had several games rained out or cancelled. But throughout the year hitting was a bright spot for Deerfield, as the team batting average was .269, highest in the team's history. Most valuable player Jeff Mason was one of the leaders of the Warrior attack with a better than .400 batting average.

The sophomore team also had a fine season. The team finished in second place in the conference, and many players were expected to move up and bolster the varsity in future years.

Golfers Take Third Place In Conference Meet

Completing one of their best seasons, the 1967 varsity golf team posted an overall record of 9-6. During the course of the season the Warriors had a number of close matches, including a contest with conference champions Maine South, in which they fell by only 3 strokes.

The Warriors were at their best in the conference meet, where they finished third with a 318, only 4 strokes away from the first place team, Maine South. Pacing the Warriors was most valuable player John Phillips, who carded a 77 for third place. The Warrior's efforts enabled them to finish fourth in the conference standings.

The sophomore team concluded its season on a high note as it won the conference meet. Keith Whitaker posted an 81 in the meet to place first in individual scoring. With the return of many varsity players and several standouts from the sophomore squad, the 1968 team had hopes of becoming a solid contender for the conference championship.

Netmen Post Undefeated Dual Meet Season

The 1967 varsity tennis team posted another successful season. They finished second in the Central Suburban League standings, although they notched an undefeated dual meet record. Their standing resulted from their second place finish in the conference meet.

Under the direction of new Head Coach Karl Sutter, the netmen worked long and hard on the courts to perfect their play. Leading the team was junior Les Blackburn, selected most valuable player. Conference finalists for the Warriors included freshman third singles player Chris Palmer, who finished second, and the first doubles team of Jim Gesler and Steve Waldman, who also placed second.

On the sophomore level, the Warriors also finished in second place. Conference champions for Deerfield included Rick Sangerman, Marc Minkus and the doubles team of Jim Shankman and Ron Lefcourt. With the return of practically the entire varsity squad this year, the Warriors sought to regain the conference title.

Trackmen Retain Perfect Dual Meet Record

Under the leadership of new Head Coach Hein, the 1967 Warrior trackmen posted their best season in history. They notched a perfect 7-0 record to remain undefeated in dual meets for two consecutive years.

Their superiority was obvious as they won both the indoor and outdoor conference meets, the Lake Forest Invitational, the Lake County Meet and the Spartan Relays. They demonstrated their ability in the conference meet as their score was almost double that of their closest opponent.

The Warriors fared well in district competition, placing third. Qualifying for state competition were most valuable runner Rob Holt, Kevin Harvey, Scott Ascher and the 880 yard relay of Dan Field, Mitch Weiner, Mike Cloud and Chuck Shattuck.

The sophomore team also turned in another outstanding season, posting a 6-1 record. Although many individuals competed with the varsity, the sophomores managed to win the Lake Forest Invitational and placed third in the conference. With the return of this outstanding talent next year, the Warriors looked to continue their conference domination.

Intramurals Give Students Chance to Compete

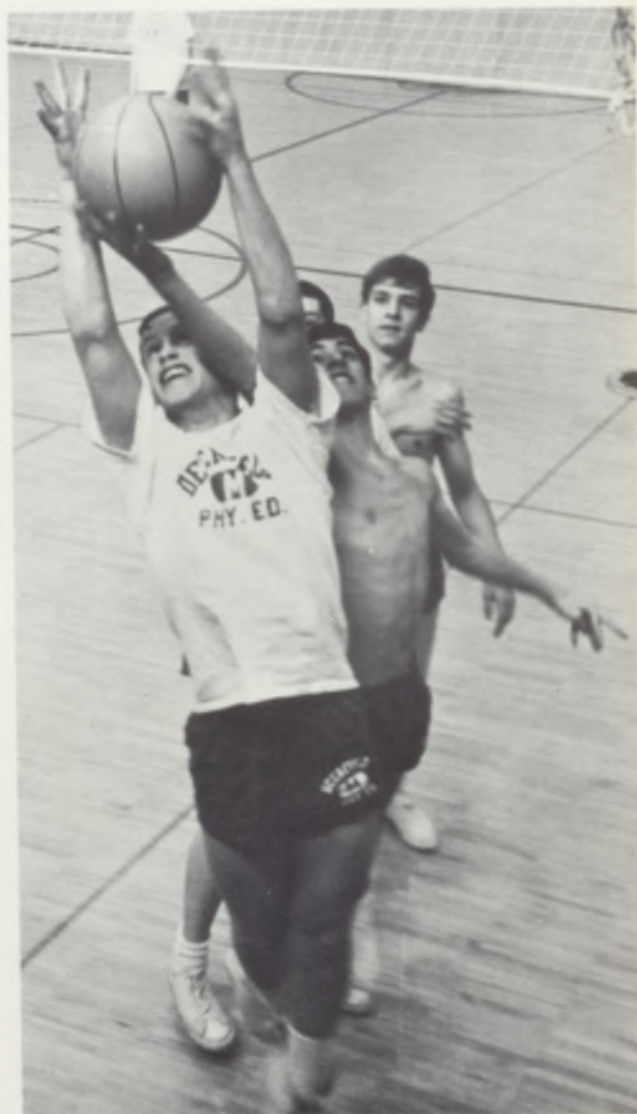

Students who are unable to participate in interscholastic sports are not forgotten at Deerfield High School. The after-school intramural program allows all students to engage in a number of activities.

In the fall there is a touch football tournament in which each boys' session fields a team. A large number of students are involved in the basketball tournament during the winter. The spring activities include both intramural track and swim meets. Student interest and enthusiasm have made all of these tournaments successful and rewarding.

In addition to the fine interscholastic program, the athletic department has provided ample opportunities for students to participate in sports.

Classes Apply Ingenuity To Year's Projects

Sporting bows and ties saying "Go Frosh," freshmen joined into the spirit of the Homecoming pep rally. Their float, a boat captioned "Kick Maine West," took second place in the competition. Halloween provided a theme for the freshman mixer. In addition to participating in various money-making projects, freshmen enjoyed a fun night in March and a class picnic in June.

A productive year for sophomores began with a bake sale that helped to pay for their Homecoming float. The sophomore class arranged the half-time activities for Homecoming and supported the teams at the pep rally with red sweaters and newspaper hats. The sophomore dance was held April 6.

The juniors' Homecoming float, a covered wagon entitled "How the West Was Won" and their Homecoming dance, "The Goal Rush," emphasized a western theme. Class banners, an original cheer and an electric sign helped them win the spirit jug at the Homecoming pep rally.

Class of 1968 Introduces Senior Privileges

In September, 1964, a mass of typically bewildered freshmen entered DHS and became known collectively as the class of '68. Their first president, Chuck Katzenberg, led them through the year with the help of Kyle Randerson, vice-president, and Sally Running, secretary-treasurer. The freshman picnic, with booths representing each session, brought a close to the school year 1964-65.

They returned the following September with officers Chuck Katzenberg, president; Andy Straus, vice-president; Leroy Koetz, secretary-treasurer; and Mary Keuther, social chairman. The Spirit Jug was awarded to them at the Homecoming pep rally. The sophomore dance, "Aloha," was the first all-school dance sponsored by the class of '68.

President Fred Gahl, Vice-President Sally Running, Secretary Becky Snell, Treasurer Terry Globerson and Social Chairman Susie Hanscom led them through a lively junior year. They became the first class at Deerfield to claim the Spirit Jug for both sophomore and junior years. At their Homecoming dance, "Thanks for the Memory," an original movie was presented. Spring college entrance tests prepared them for the year of planning to follow.

Beginning the final year at Deerfield, they plunged into Homecoming activities, winning first prize for their float, "We Nose We're Gonna Win." The new system of senior privileges gave them a sense of freedom, at the same time compelling them to use their time wisely. President of the senior class was Bill Kahnweiler. Jeff McDonald was elected vice-president; Terry Globerson, treasurer; Becky Snell, secretary; and Susie Hanscom, social chairman.

We felt change
as a continuous vibration that kept us vaguely aware of our surroundings.

Our own diversity kept us unclassifiable, moving from day to day
somewhere between chaos and stagnancy.

The year was unremarkable;
successes were tempered with failures,
enthusiasm with indifference.

Yet it was a year
made unique by the welcome flashes of contrasting emotions and incidents that lifted us unexpectedly from the plane of routine.
