Something Worth Saying

After school, students seem to filter off into different areas. From athletics to publications to Forensics, our school offers a niche for almost everyone. And if you're not involved in any of the many activities, you can be a spectator of our theatrical productions, athletic events or dances. Students also have interests outside the school, like jobs or church groups. Every unique person at DHS has his own unique interests. And every unique person has something worth saying.

Stephanie Graham pauses in the middle of her speech, trying to remember what she was going to say.

Seniors take time out from Mud Volleyball to pose for a Crest toothpaste commercial.

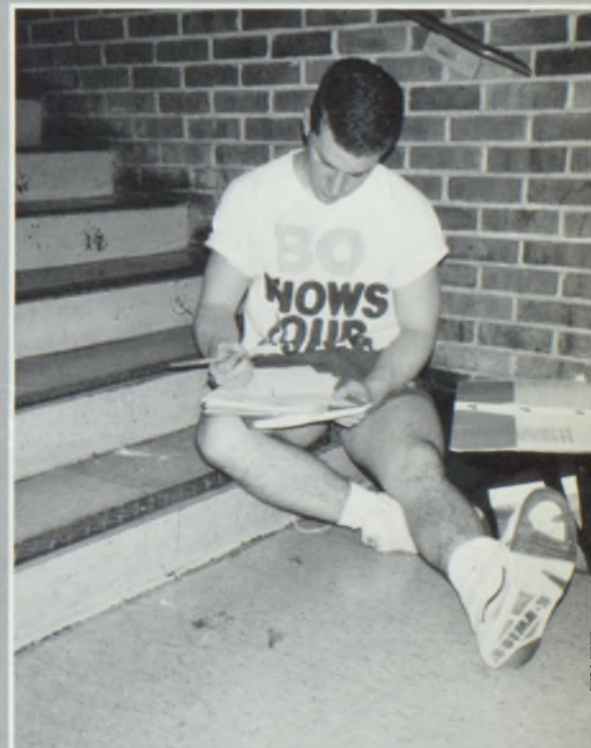

Freshman Fred Gernady tries to keep his balance atop a collapsing pyramid of his friends.

Big Chief Willie Jon Williams keeps his big gorilla friend company on the senior float.

Eric Singer immerses himself in an almost-forgotten senior pastime—homework.

Rory Kaplan and Mindi Abrahamson look on as cheerleaders Jackie Dauria and Carin Davis bump heads at the pep rally.

Even though they didn't plan on doing too much homework during their senior year, Heather Hobbs and Tracy Cramer bought their books, just for fun.

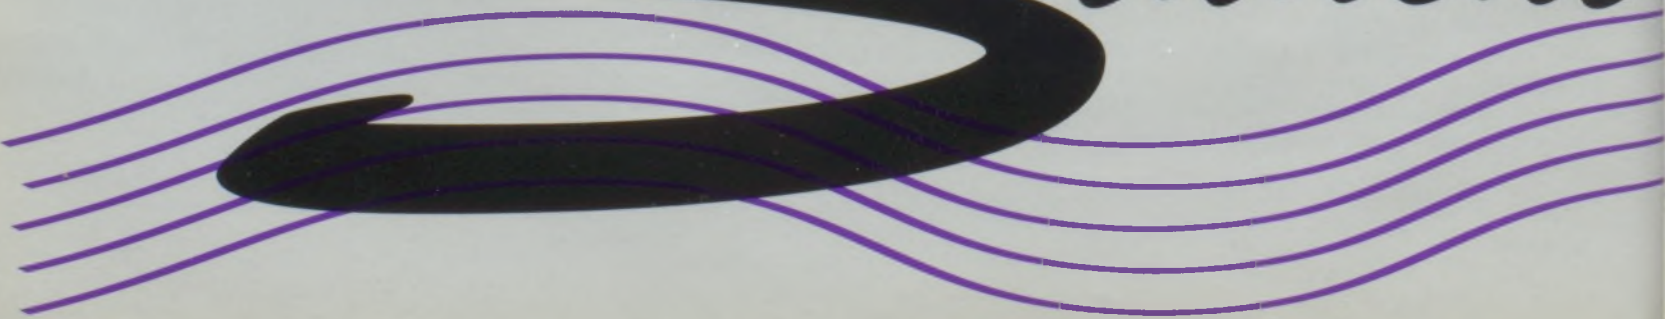

Steve Greenspan and Dino Pagliai try to find their names among the slew of papers posted in the front hall.

Lauren Hertzberg and Sam Williams attempt to decorate the sophomore section of the gym with a single balloon and a single piece of streamer.

Worth Your While

Although students care a great deal about their academics, after spending eight hours cooped up in classrooms, they are more than ready to get out, have a little fun, and unwind from the stresses of school.

Too often a student's schedule seems to only allow for pressure and deadlines. So it is one's own personal free time that continues to be most valuable over the course of the year. Between homework, extra-curriculars, and outside interests, many of us are learning how to prioritize and other valuable lessons that are worth our while.

Team Spirit Prevails Mudfest

Keeping clean was the last thing on anyone's mind at the second annual Deerfield Park District Mudfest, a very popular event this past fall with the students here at DHS. The event, held on a Sunday in September, gave the students an opportunity to roll around in the mud and have fun.

Students formed their own teams with friends, which enabled them to participate in various games. The battles included volleyball, an intense obstacle course, and a mean game of tug-of-war.

"Mudfest was the most down and dirty event I ever experienced in my life," said junior Sarah Peterson.

Student Council's annual "Kick-off Dance" was once again a great success. It provided the freshmen with a chance to meet others by socializing, while the upperclassmen were able to enjoy a night of dancing. Students danced to the music of Nirvana, Guns 'N Roses, and the latest Top 40 hits. The dance helped students realize that Deerfield is a fun place to be. The Student Council spent numerous hours constructing the decorations and setting up the very successful fundraiser. "The Kickoff Dance was a tremendous success," said Student Council member Scooter McCarthy. "It pumped the students up for the new school year."

Overall, DHS students had two great weekends. One full of mud, the other dancing the night away.

It was the most down and dirty event... in my life.

Bungle in the Jungle

Homecoming

Student Council kicked off Bungle in the Jungle with their third annual Lock-in. Students found the entire school decorated as Spirit Week began. During this week students dressed according to each day's theme. The dress-up days included the annual red and grey and class color days along with the ever-popular opposite sex day.

The senior women beat the juniors in a hard-fought powder puff game ending with a score of 24-12.

At Friday's pep rally, students showed their enthusiasm as they participated in the spirit contest won once again by the seniors.

Saturday morning the parade marched through Deerfield as the marching band, cheerleaders and pom-pom squad entertained the crowd. The float contest was won by the Ferocious Freshmen.

After a 34-14 Warrior win in the football game, Spirit Week closed with the dance, "Jungle Love." A change added to this year's dance was the addition of a performance by the Second City touring company. Junior executive board members added the show in hopes of making this year's homecoming different from the past.

Sean McMahon and Jackie Dauria were announced the 1991 Homecoming King and Queen, receiving flowers from Student Council.

Cheerleaders rode in convertibles and cheered for the Warriors, entertaining the crowds who gathered to watch the parade go by.

Jon Kaden stands unruffled, seemingly oblivious of the senior float's monstrous gorilla ready to attack him.

Cheerleaders make a pyramid to excite the pep rally crowd to even greater heights.

Seniors Christine Sanderson and Corey Harrison switch clothes for Opposite Sex Day during Spirit Week.

Senior women cheer on their teammates in the powder puff game against the juniors. The seniors fought hard and won 24-12.

Savage Seniors raise their arms and cheer to declare their invincibility. As always, the senior class ran away with the spirit jug.

Nate Bish bares his teeth and yells like a savage at the juniors opposing him.

Savage senior executive board members yell to the crowd at the intersection of Deerfield and Waukegan.

Sophomores sit sheltered under the canopy of leaves on their float for the parade.

Painted windows were only one of the products of the decorations put up during Lock-in.

Fully-attired Ferocious Freshmen fail to stray from their jungle.

Warrior players tear through the cheerleaders' hoop on the way to the start of their homecoming victory.

Seniors Sheri Rosenberg and Radhika Shah huddle under a blanket to keep warm during the game.

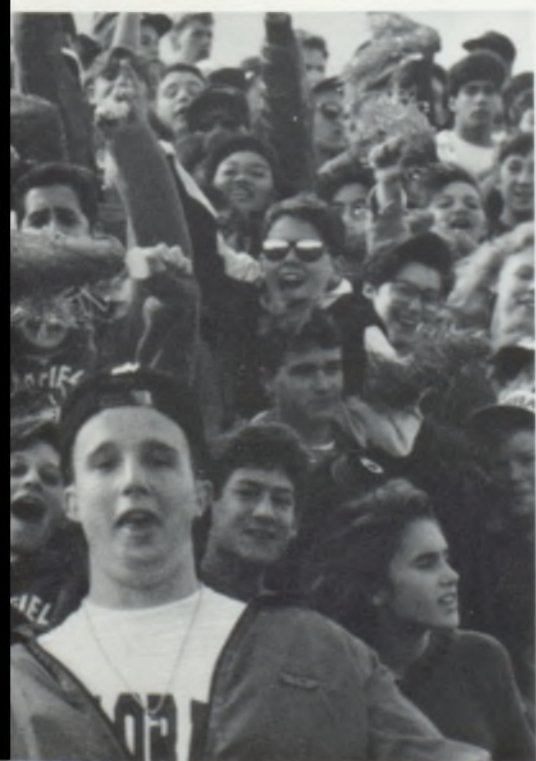

Deerfield Marching Band drummers continue the tradition of standing on their heads at halftime.

A hoard of mad spectators cheer in anticipation of another Warrior touchdown.

Oblivious to their surroundings, seniors Kevin Carlson and Rachel Salit embrace in their own world.

Senior Jay Masheris attempts to stay on his feet as Niles West players try to bury him.

Assume Crash Positions Stunts

Deerfield High School's 1991 Stunts production, "Assume Crash Positions," consisted of numerous skits dealing with flying, proving that flying can be quite an experience.

"Stunts is different every year, it keeps getting better and better," director Carly Winer said.

This year's theme allowed for the Stunts crew to expose the humor in people's everyday experiences with traveling by plane.

The skits dealt with not only the actual flight experience, but also what happens at the airport and inside the cockpit.

"Back to Life," performed by seniors Jenny Liace, Julie Reinish, and Erin Weiss, along with the band None of the Above, displayed the musical talent of Deerfield High School.

"Assume Crash Positions" not only had musical and comical skits, and original dance routines but it also had exclusive footage of two DHS students' daring flight through the "Danger Zone."

Stunts participants found the experience rewarding.

"Directing Stunts and being a part of it is something I will always remember," Winer said. "It was fun to work with such a diverse cast."

As Stunts member Michelle Kazak put it, "The variety of original acts allowed Stunts to be the best it could be."

Taking a break from hijacking a plane, hi-jackers Jorie Cohen, Orley Moskovits, and Jen Caracciolo break out in three-part harmony.

Pam Tivers, Heather Lazar, and Michelle Simms brew up another pot of mystery stew for their unsuspecting flyers.

"Crazy Dickie," a.k.a. Jacob Ostrum, tries to sell his surplus luggage to the audience.

Stuffed animals flock to Mark Murphy as he plays his bass in "Feelin' Alright" with None of the Above in their performance.

Liz Herr, Megan Vogel, Jocelyn Fischer, and Kirsten O'Shaughnessy share their life stories while waiting for a plane in "New York, New York."

Don't Drink the Water Fall Play

This year's cast of the fall play, Don't Drink the Water by Woody Allen, withstood great illness of more than half of the cast and still produced a great show.

The Woody Allen play is set in a U.S. embassy in a communist country. A very dignified Ambassador runs the embassy and when he leaves his incompetent son in charge, chaos strikes. The Hollanders, a Jewish American family from New Jersey, are chased into the embassy by the Communist police. Apparently, they had innocently wandered into a restricted area to take pictures. Little did they know, they had trespassed onto missile sites and rocket installations. Now the Communist police will stop at nothing to capture the Hollanders. But the police will have to wait them out, since they have no authority inside the walls of the embassy. Throw in a priest who is moonlighting as a magician, a psychotic chef, an assistant who thought he was the Wright Brothers {both of them!}, a temperamental Sultan, and you have a show that has you rolling in the aisles.

The play was directed by David Hirsch, and assistant directed by Kelly Belmont. Philip Novak, an actor in the performance, felt that, "While everyone in the audience experienced a memorable event for years to come, the performers gained experience that they will carry with them for a lifetime."

After a bomb flies through the window everyone tries to convince Walter, Corey Harrison, to escape out of the embassy.

Mr. Hirsch transforms Corey Harrison into the obnoxious Jewish man, Mr. Hollander.

Mrs. Hollander introduces her daughter, Whitney Powell, to the ambassador, Steven Block.

Mrs. Hollander, Michelle Simms, yells at her husband for taking pictures of the missile depot.

The idiot ambassador, Steve Block, and the uptight ambassador's assistant, Scott Strauss, try to figure out what to do with the refugees.

Flippin' Thru the Flicks Gymnastics Show

Deerfield High School Tumblers, a group of approximately thirty girls, tried out to participate in this club in September. They spent the first six weeks of school practicing for their November performance, Flippin' through the Flicks.

All of their routines were performed to songs from popular movies. The tumblers opened to "Wild Women Do," from the movie Pretty Woman. Then the senior girls did a routine to "Greased Lightning," from the movie Grease.

The tumblers consisted of two different clubs, a senior club and a junior club. Each group did various kinds of tumbling with different tumbling passes in them. The show included a wide range of talents, from exceptional dancers to members of the Deerfield varsity gymnastic team.

"This [Tumblers] is a very good opportunity to meet new people and learn to cooperate with a large amount of fellow students," feels Rachel Sterling, a three year member of the club. "This is a fun way to get involved with something that you enjoy doing."

This year's show was performed in the Exhibition Gym, where friends, family, and students watched the show. None of the Above, a student band, provided added entertainment for the crowd. Overall, the show was a great success and fun was had by all.

Josh Siegal, Mark Murphy, and Jonah Baker of None of the Above, entertain the crowd between acts.

Senior girls flip through the 50s as they perform to the song "Greased Lightning."

Gymnasts focus on the "Eye of the Tiger."

Jorie Gillis, Melissa Wilson, Tracy Bender, and Veronica Jaeger perform "O'Industry" choreographed by Jorie Gillis.

Marcy-Newberry School Chest

Once again the students at DHS demonstrated how charitable they are by helping to support the Marcy Newberry Foundation. School Chest was kicked off by a visit of the organizers of the foundation. They informed the students of all the good that could be done through their support of Marcy Newberry, an organization to assist needy people in Chicago's inner city.

Their programs include the headstart program for kids in preschool, afterschool activities for students and employment encouragement for adults.

Students helped to raise money in various ways. Many people sold blow pops, had bake sales, and designed raffles. The administration organized a raffle in order to raise money for the cause. Students also eagerly participated in copper, silver, and paper week.

The homerooms were in competition to raise the most amount of money. The most successful homeroom was given a trip to the place of their choice, while the others received a pizza lunch or a doughnut breakfast. Other people participated in a walk-a-thon, or a bowl-a-thon. Deerfield students showed their enthusiasm to raise money for this worthy cause through these events.

Bill Karaganis, the Student Council treasurer, said, "Even though we did not reach our goal, everyone still tried hard. Overall it was a success."

Jason Miller smiles after producing a work of art to help his homeroom win the School Chest money race.

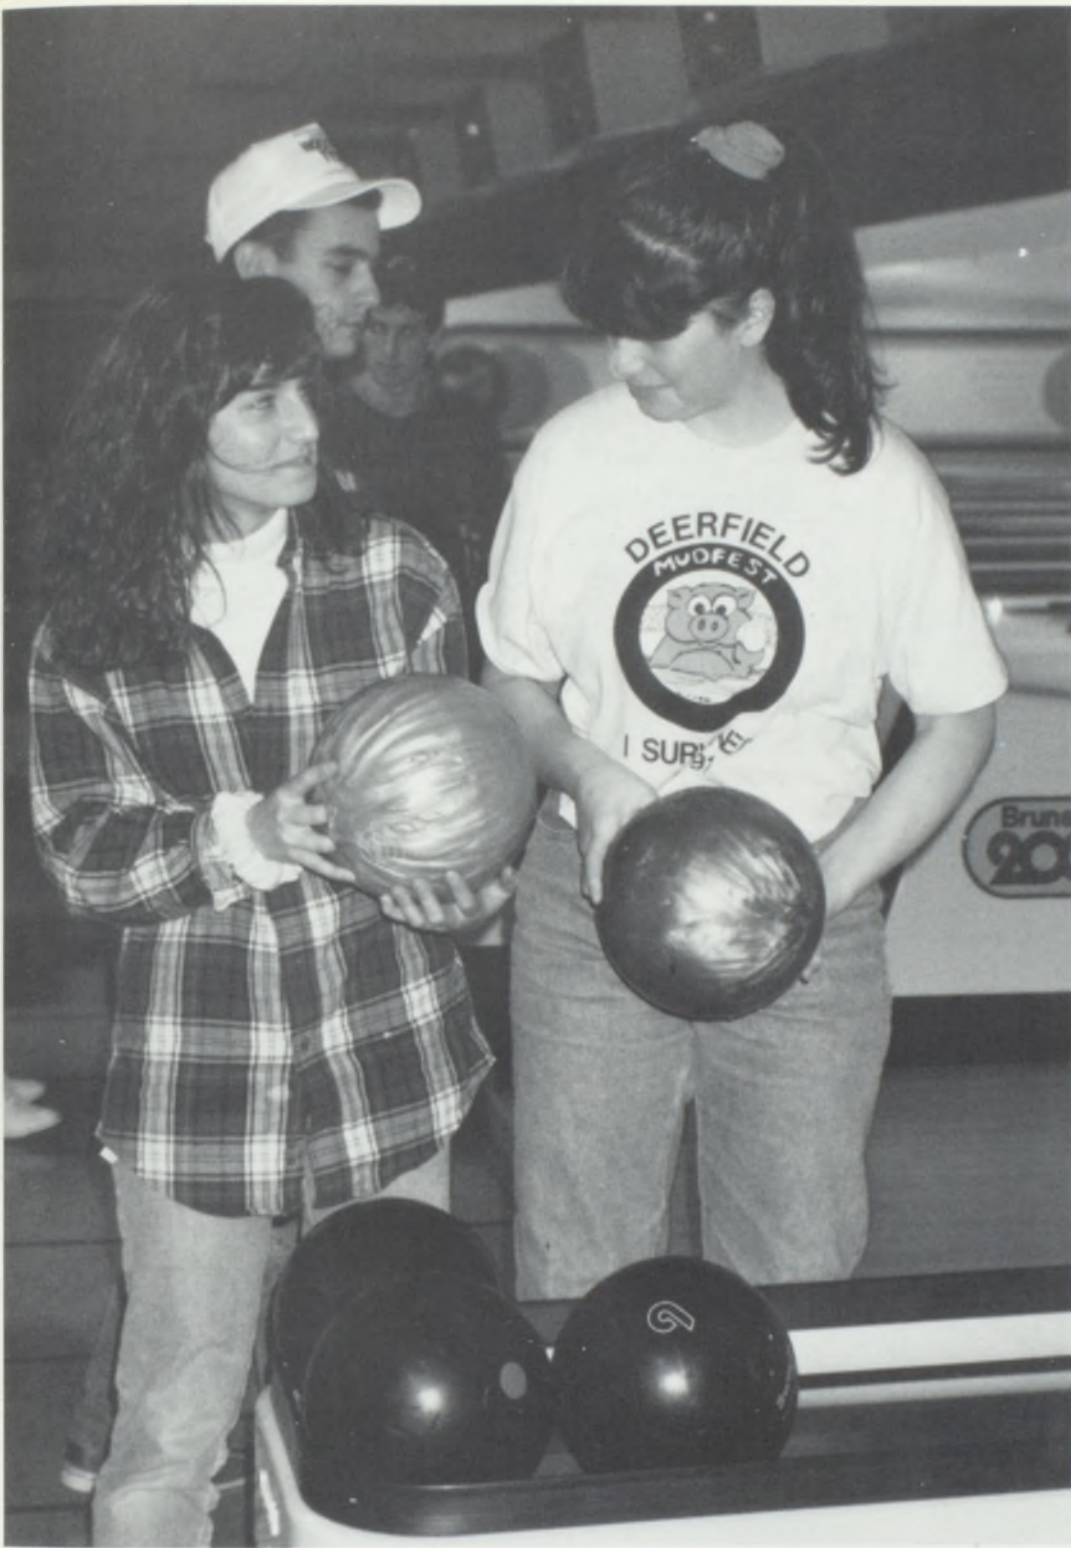

Angie Rabl, Spencer Maughan and Jim Perrin show their enthusiasm to raise money for School Chest by selling pasteries at the bake sale.

Sean McMahon and Josh Siegal demonstrate their musical skills in the Student Union.

Seniors Jorie Gillis and Laura Smith put their competition faces on while bowling for bucks.

Rachel Salit and Laura Smith change shoes, like Mr. Rogers, before bowling.

T A Leap Through Time urnabout 1 • 9 • 9 • 2

Turnabout 1992, "Leap Through Time" was an exhilarating experience for all of the Deerfield High School students that attended. The dance is traditionally sponsored by the Girls Intramural Interscholastic Association (GIMA).

Turnabout is a dance held at Deerfield High School in which a girl asks a guy on a date, and the girl takes her date out for the evening to the dance and out for dinner.

The theme this year was "Leap Through Time," because the dance was held on leap day. All of the decorations centered around different time periods. As the students entered the school, they walked under a canopy of streamers. On the walls there were two feet on a single wing. This signified a female and male flying through time. Sarah Peterson, a member of GIMA felt that, "The cafeteria looked the best ever. This was on account of the dedicated GIMA members that spent all night working on decorating the cafeteria. We couldn't have done it without Ms. Coleman."

Mike Jewel and Mindi Abrahamson recieved the votes of the Deerfield High School students, and became the 1992 Turnabout king and queen. After dancing at the school, most couples proceeded to dinner. Some enjoyed various forms of entertainment.

Joanna Reich pulls her date Jeremy Stasek onto the dance floor for a slow, romantic dance.

Melissa Berger and Jon Kaden take time out from the great dancing to relax and talk.

Ruthie Clark and Shannon Goulding smile as they talk about their dates and the music.

Ms. Coleman passes out refreshments, with a bright smile, to the thirsty dancers.

Sari Topel shows off her smile as she laughs at a joke told to her by her date.

M The Sound of Music Musical

This year's musical, "The Sound of Music," told the unforgettable story of the Von Trapp family and a very special "governess" named Maria, portrayed by senior Julie Reinish.

The tale of the Von Trapp family is recognized as one of the most timeless stories in history. Maria comes from Nonberg Abbey in Austria into the estate of the great naval captain, Georg Von Trapp played by Ethan Max. Maria makes an instant impact on the seven children of the family, teaching them how to sing and act like children. At first, Captain Von Trapp is non-appreciative of Maria's efforts, but his children's harmonious singing brings tears to his eyes.

From there on, Captain Von Trapp falls in love with Maria. However, a great danger comes to the family when Nazi Germany offers Captain Von Trapp a commission in their navy. The Von Trapps escape to Nonberg Abbey from the concert, and in the end, the family journeys over the mountains into Switzerland safely.

The company of the musical, as was stressed by Mr. Hirsch, worked as one unit for a common goal. That common goal was to make the show the best ever. Phil Saken expressed his feelings this way: "I quote from Peter O'Toole from 'My Favorite Year'—'This was the most fun and the hardest work I have done since the world was young.'"

Lisle, played by Laurie Ferdman, tries to convince Rolf, played by Steven Block, that she is mature.

Julie Reinish, as the governess Maria, teaches the Von Trapp children to sing.

Adam DeGraff concentrates intently as a part of the pit orchestra.

Maria and Captain Von Trapp share their first dance together, falling in love.

Maria breaks out in song, singing "My Favorite Things" to Mother Abbess Denise Crovetti.

The Sound of Music's cast and crew gathers for a picture.

Adventures of the Mind, Trial, Band Trip n School Activities

What do Adventures of the Mind, the Mock Law Trial, and the band trip have in common? They are all interesting activities that a select number of kids at DHS have been able to participate in.

Adventures of the Mind was a great success again this year. Participation in the program is based on the quality of grades and performance on a qualifying exam. Seniors from DHS and HPHS came together for four different field trips.

These field trips provide an opportunity for students to use their creative talents in a variety of ways. Some of the things they learned were risk-taking, improvisation, and the making of commercial. One field trip consisted of students learning about the art of movie-making, another took them to the Lyric Opera.

For three apprehensive days, Mr. Russo's business law class was involved in the throes of intense litigation. The class wasn't being sued, but the students were just as mindful of the outcome. It was the annual Mock Law Trial.

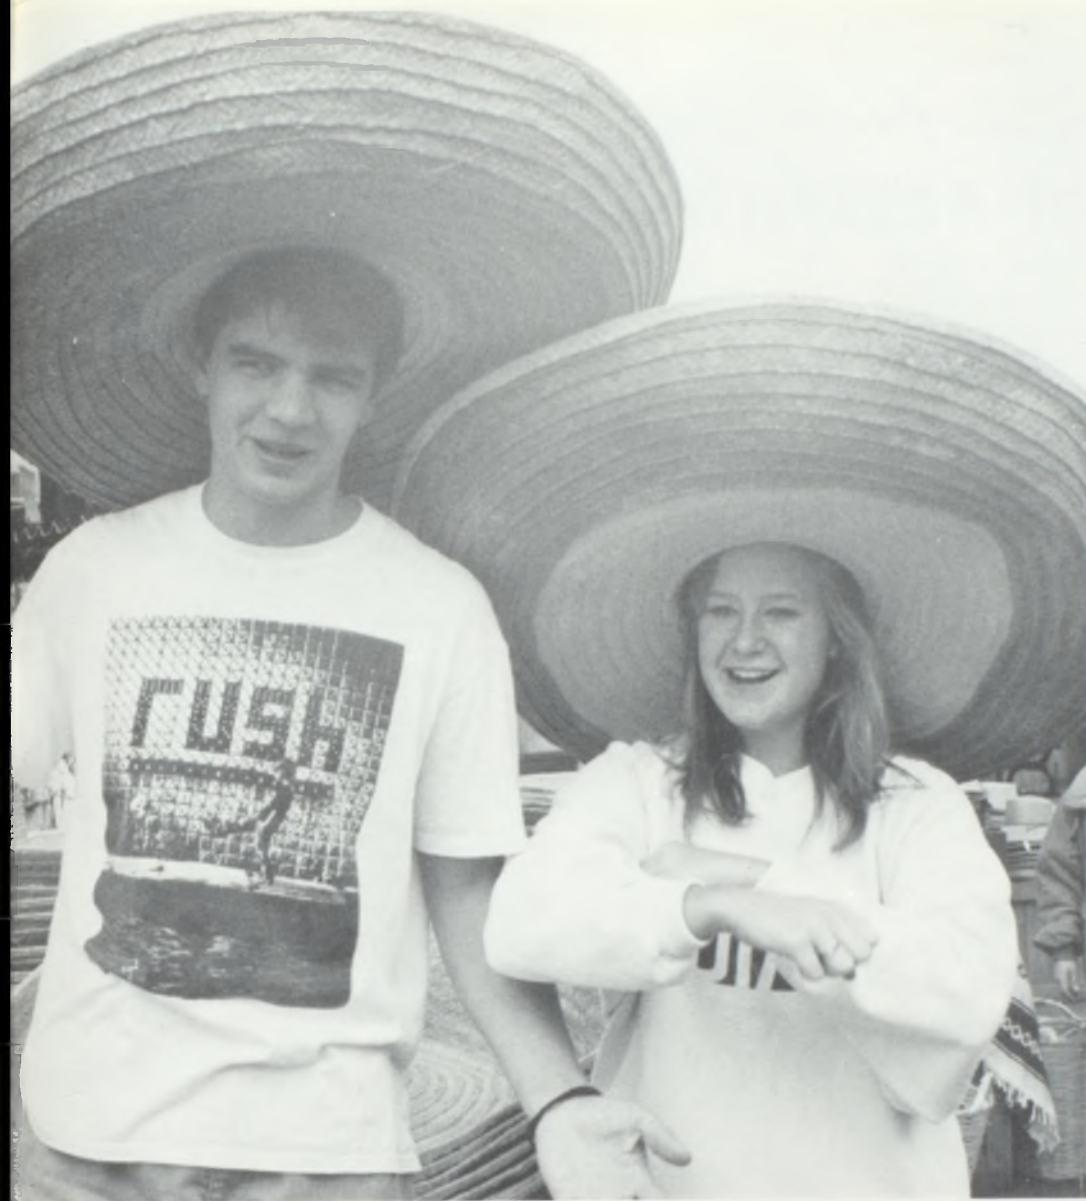

The Deerfield High School bands went on to Orlando, Florida for their band trip. They played at Disneyworld's Epcot Center and Magic Kingdom and Universal Studios. The symphonic and concert bands combined to put on a concert and the jazz band also performed. All had a great time!

A Hockey, Health Clubs, Jobs fter School Activities

What little free time students have after homework, athletics, and extracurriculars, are spent on the job and at health clubs.

Yet a group of Deerfield students devotes its time to an out-of-school organization, the Deerfield Hockey team.

The Warriors posted a 14-12 record, claiming second place in the Founders Cup tournament, and included three victories over archrival Highland Park.

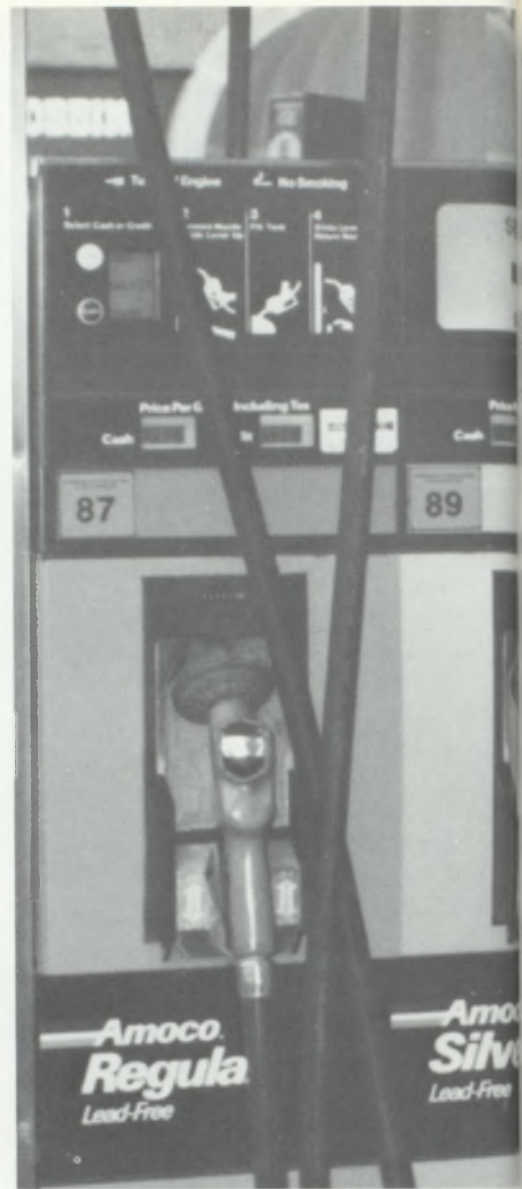

"We started off a little slow. Sometimes we weren't playing too well and lost to teams we shouldn't have," sophomore Keith Ridgway explained.

"We really improved by the end of the season and proved it when we beat Lake Forest," added sophomore goalie Brian Riplinger.

Head coach Keith Johnson praised the efforts of a number of individuals, including "John [Farmer], Todd [Shraiberg] and Roy Wilson, [who] have really come through in terms of scoring, and Jeff Dickman and Rob Mulsoff have also both put in consistent efforts. But I've seen everyone improve, so I don't like to single people out," he said.

A disappointing loss to Notre Dame knocked the team out of the playoffs, ending hopes to defend last year's state title. But the team is already anticipating a successful season next year.

W What students do on Weekends

Despite popular belief that Deerfield does not offer exciting weekend activities, the Deerfield students have been entertained by attending various social events. On the weekends students find exciting ways to stay busy and have fun.

Many students demonstrate their school spirit by attending various sporting events. Sports fans often attend football, basketball, and hockey games over the weekend. Other students choose to attend entertaining activities such as the Gymnastic show, the Dance show, and theatre productions. The students view these activities as fun and as entertaining social events.

Other Deerfield students choose to hang out with their friends. Various places in which you can find Deerfield High School students eating are Chilli's and Claim Company. A favorite hangout among the students is also "the corner." Although, in Deerfield you can usually locate a majority of the students in their cars, searching for the frequently lied about parties.

Anxious seniors find themselves continually traveling on weekends. They often visit the possible colleges they plan to attend. Megan Mead feels, "Visiting schools over weekends really helped me make a final decision." Weekends are times to which everyone looks forward.

How phones affect kids' lives

elephones

Few of us realize just how much the telephone affects our daily lives. Almost everything we do is centered around the phone. Whether it be homework, gossip, or personal problems, the phone is always there for you.

Recently 150 students from DHS took a survey concerning the telephone. Out of these 150, 134 students have call waiting or two lines. 96 out of these same students have conference calling so they are able to talk to more than one person at a time. 87 of these students have their own line.

Despite all the homework the students at DHS constantly complain about, the phone remains a major part of teenage lives. Talking about things ranging from friends, to problems, to boyfriends and girlfriends, and just plain school, they spend a lot of time on the phone each night.

Many students surveyed said they would probably be maintaining an "A" average if it weren't for their telephones. When asked if her telephone time was worth it, Mary Reimer said "My telephone is my connection to all my friends I don't see during the day."

None of us can imagine our lives without telephones. Not only talking to local friends, but also to many who have moved, not to mention our brothers, sisters, and friends at college. Telephones are always going to be in our lives.

Something to Shout About

*A*thletics at Deerfield have never failed to show opposing schools a quality effort. Hours of practice and commitment ensured determination and great competition.

Our teams set high expectations at the start of their seasons. As some teams faltered and fell during post-season play, other teams rose to the spotlight.

What stood Deerfield athletes apart from the rest was the ability to overcome obstacles to succeed and to recognize achievement in even the darkest moments.

Booting to Victory

Boys' Soccer began its 1991 experience with a grueling 5 kilometer run at 8 a.m. on the first day of "Hell Week." Their first competitive encounter took place soon thereafter, the team completing the Wheeling Tournament with a third place finish.

According to senior Nathan Otto, team improvement was a continuous process as the season progressed. "We were counted out early because we lost a lot of starters from last year," he said, "but all in all we won more games than expected."

Spirit and unity abounded as almost the entire team shaved their heads, and recited the traditional "Zigga-Zacki" cheer for good luck before every game.

Rival Highland Park was handed a 2-0 defeat prior to the Deerfield Invitational, where the team captured a second place finish despite severe weather conditions throughout the entire tournament.

Juniors Ronald Goldberg, Francis Hollweck, Blaine Barnett, and senior Eric Kessel were honored on the All-Conference team. Barnett, who was successful on nine out of ten penalty shot attempts during the year, was also named to the All-Sectional squad.

In state tournament action, the first regional game proved to be one of the year's most exhilarating victories, as the team finished by claiming a double-overtime win from Niles North.

SPIKING TO GLORY

A successful conference win and improved school spirit marked a great season for the 1991 Girls' Volleyball team.

Greater support and encouragement helped the team accomplish their goal of winning conference and going undefeated for a final conference record of 10-0. And with that perfect record came rewards, including the honor of shaving Coach Bolek's head in front of the student body.

Superstitions were a large part of the season during both practices and games. For every win that the team earned, they put tags with Warrior heads and the colors of the team they beat on their shoes. "When things looked bad during a game," said senior Linda Eder, "we would look down at our shoes and remember how much we wanted to win conference, and would keep doing our best." Another tradition was to run facing the walls of the exhibition gym during practice to see the banners depicting past conference winners for motivation.

The team did their best, and had an outstanding record to show for it, with many team members honored in different ways. Seniors Lindsay Morgan, Julie Geerdes, and Linda Eder and juniors Peggy Mandel and Chelsea Jackson were named as All-Conference athletes, and Geerdes and Eder were also selected to the All-Lake County team.

Milestone a hallmark of solid season

Coach Paul Adams acquired his 200th career victory in a season that boasted success in all aspects of competition. The varsity team posted a 9-2 record this year, growing as a team throughout.

"We started off as juniors and seniors," said senior Josh Smith, "but as the season progressed, individual contributions became one team effort."

Coach Adams was inducted into the Illinois Coaches' Hall of Fame while on the field he held the reigns to an immense wealth of talent. Seniors Bryan Jurewicz, Brett Flouret, Brian Burns, Mike Jewell, Chris Lim, Dana Lyons, Jay Masheris, Josh Smith, and juniors Jay Mansavage and Bob Kasperek were All-Conference athletes, Jurewicz also rising to the All-State team and capturing the prestigious Illinois Gatorade Player of the Year award.

The team coasted to the Central Suburban League title, shutting out both Maine East and Highland Park 30-0 and 27-0, respectively.

The first round of the state tournament featured a sound beating of the Lake Forest Scouts 31-14. Unfortunately, the team didn't fare as well in the second round against Warren.

"It was a disappointment because we knew we could have gone further," said Smith, "but for the juniors it was a valuable learning experience for next year's season."

Combining their efforts, senior Jim Rategan and junior Mark Flax bring down a Niles North player trying to advance the ball.

Backfield Support

Underclass football teams secured considerable success this year, their members gaining valuable experience while at the same time enjoying the game to its fullest.

"Anytime you play for Deerfield football, it's a lot of fun," commented sophomore Mike Bearak, able to label this year a "great season" despite a 4-3-2 record. Memorable experiences transcended the win-loss column.

Such experiences included a Glenbrook North game which was halted half-way through due to lightning, and a triumphant 26-12 victory over Highland Park at a frozen Walters Field.

The freshman teams displayed an enormous amount of ability throughout the season.

The freshman "B" squad cruised to an 8-0 season, attaining with ease all of their goals for the season. Everything continued to bode well for future varsity teams.

"There is as much talent on the 'A' team as on 'B,'" said freshman Brian Collins, "so when it all comes together, we'll have a good team."

Both teams won their Homecoming games by wide margins, the "B" team crushing Niles West 40-6. The sophomores put it together near the end of the season. "We really came on in the last couple games," said coach Penrod. According to sophomore Adam Bisch, the Highland Park game was the point of the team's "explosion."

Mad in Plaid

The best part of the 1991 Field Hockey season was the feelings of unity and togetherness that everybody felt.

Although their record may not reflect it, everyone felt they had a successful season, and look forward to the things to come from next year's team.

The group had many superstitions that helped them win games, including saying the field hockey cheer, "Iggy La Bamba" before every game. Another tradition included the annual toilet papering of the players houses by the seniors the night before a home tournament.

The "flick chicks" ended their season successfully, fighting to the finish in their last sectional game against New Trier. Players selected to the All-State team included junior Monica Hakimi to the first team, and seniors Kathy Croak and Belinda Aguayo to the second team.

Defensive player Betsy Hoag puts all her field hockey skills to good use as she stops the ball flying toward the goal while her teammates wait for the ball..

Sophomore Jamie McPhee battles her opponent to gain control of the ball, as sophomore Irene Buzyna sprints downfield to await her teammate's drive.

The team got along really well and worked together to succeed.

Teamwork and abounding talent helped to spur the 1991 Girls' Tennis Team on to new levels of victory.

The team's long practices helped to prepare everyone for the tough competition they faced from opposing teams. The team got to know one another on and off the court, especially when they got together to toilet paper Coach Gluck's house. They were able to incorporate fun and fellowship into their daily routines, which helped them concentrate on winning, and led them to a second place finish in Conference.

For the first time ever, the team sent six people in two doubles and two singles spots to the sectional and state playoffs. Juniors Kerry Singer and Sreevani Gazula advanced to state in the singles category; senior Suzy Trukenbrod and sophomore Lindsay Habinak, and senior Missy Taxman and junior Angie Rabl competed in doubles.

Crossing the line

The key to success for the 1991 Girls' Cross Country team was fun and fellowship. The team worked together, supporting each other, and helping everyone succeed. "Our team was like a family," said freshman Debbie Smith. "Every Friday night before a meet we would have a pasta party and we'd spend a lot of time together outside of cross country."

The addition of eight talented freshman greatly enhanced the team's performance at meets and helped them accomplish victory.

The Boys' varsity team was privileged to tap the talents of veteran seniors Jonathan Kaden, Sean Gaydos, and Greg Kane. The freshman and varsity teams were the largest since Coach Blackburn assumed the reins. "Greater numbers enabled us to do greater things," said Kaden.

The varsity squad finished fifth in the conference and looks forward to having promising freshmen incite future success.

Swing into action

It was a season of high expectation for the Boys' Golf team. They satisfied all by exhibiting complete conference dominance and establishing an undefeated dual-meet record. This had only been accomplished twice before.

"Being ranked number two at the start of the year drove us to bring our games up to their fullest potential," said senior Jason Simons, "In our eyes we were number one." The team won sectionals and finished 8th at the state tournament at Danville.

While the Girls' Golf team did not do as well as they had hoped, everyone on the team improved a great deal.

Coach Fair was an intricate part of the team's enjoyment of the sport. "It is easy to play for Mr. Fair," said senior Jennifer Ellensohn. "Even when we didn't want to play for ourselves, we would play for him." Ellensohn advanced through Conference and Sectionals finishing 29th in State.

Making a splash

Although it was a rough season for the 1991 Girls' Swimming team, they fought to the finish, and ended the season on a successful note. The swimmers worked together well and were able to accomplish much throughout the season, despite some disappointing setbacks.

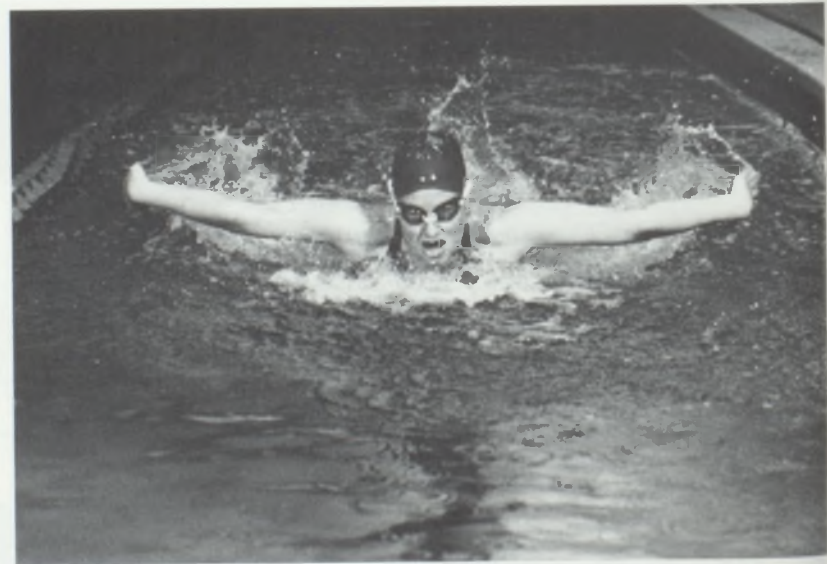

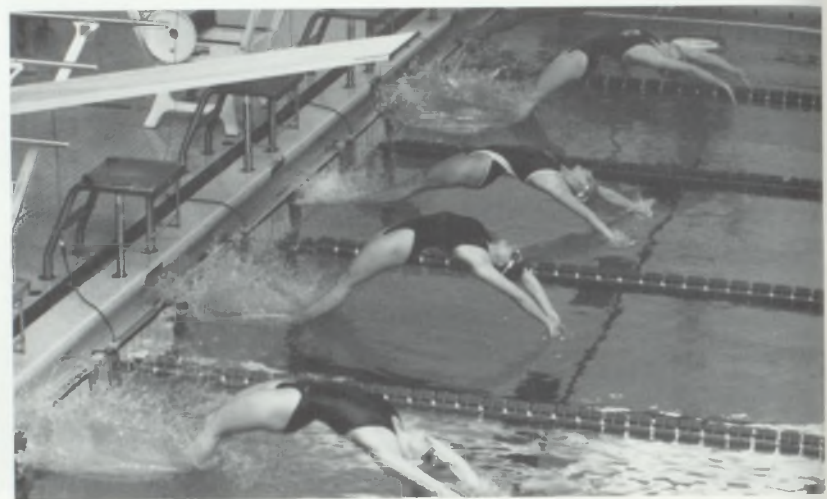

The team members maintained close relationships with each other, and were supportive and encouraging at all times. Said senior Joanna Woodson, "Even though we didn't win as many meets as we would have liked, everyone tried their hardest and supported each other."

A big disappointment for the swimmers was losing the Conference meet to Glenbrook North, but they were able to move past the experience to have eight members go to state in seven events. Junior Jillian Randell and sophomore Ellen Fraumann both competed successfully in two events, and the team also sent three relays to State.

With more than enough desire, all the Boy's Basketball Team needed for success was Coach Dickman's direction.

The season started off slowly, and the team wasn't playing together toward the beginning of the season. Things quickly changed. "We beat Prospect when they were ranked 16th in the area," said senior David Soderberg, "From that point things really turned around."

Senior Mike Schiller

continued his three-point rampage from last year, setting almost all the records on the board. Senior Sean Duncan pulled down some of his own, going 15 for 15 from the foul line in a single game.

The team finished 4th in conference and had a 13-12 record overall. Six-foot-five Bryan Jurewicz played no small part on the boards.

In state playoff action, the team defeated Lake Zurich in the first round and ended their season with a loss to Warren in the second round.

Shooting to Win

A great showing at the IHSA Regional and Sectional tournaments ended the 1991-1992 Varsity Girls' Basketball season on a successful note. After a frustrating season with many losses, the team came together when it counted and showed how good they really were.

The daily basketball practices included team warm-ups, ball handling, lay-ups, practice plays, and free throws. The team got help from talented coaches Gasper and Carter, along with individual and team suggestions from steady supporter, Mr. Morenz.

The team managed to get along well even after some rough beginnings. "At first there were little cliques instead of one unified team, but when we sat down and discussed our problems, everyone got to know each other better, and tried to work well together," said senior Kelly Velasco. The discussions worked well, and the team was able to improve their performance immediately.

Top Takedown

The Wrestling Team had an extra foe to face this year, one that wasn't on its schedule: a lack of participation. Despite having more than enough talent for success, the team had to forfeit 36 to 40 points each meet because of an incomplete lineup.

During the summer, the weight room was reconstructed and the wrestling room was moved to the old site. This allowed for more space to work with, and the freshman members enjoyed the greatest benefit.

"The new room helped the freshmen learn from us," said veteran senior Josh More. "They had the opportunity to wrestle with someone better." Freshman and varsity members worked more closely than ever this year.

Junior Jacob Liberman and senior Scott Goldstein turned in strong performances. Goldstein finished first in the Lake Forest Tournament, and More captured a 3rd place finish. Overall, the team faced the challenge posed by underparticipation.

Amazing Grace

The 1991-1992 Varsity Gymnastics team may have started off on the wrong foot, but as the season went on the team greatly improved, and ended by winning Conference and regaining the conference title that was lost last year.

Several injuries at the beginning of the season caused nervousness within the team and affected their performance at meets. Positive attitudes and improved skills helped get the team back on track to pull together and win some meets.

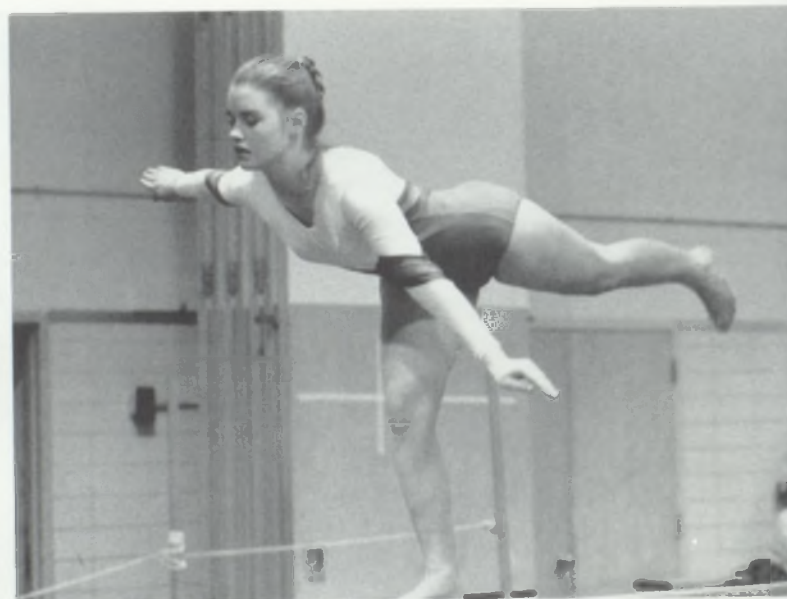

Teamwork was the key to success, and the whole team became fast friends.

Renewed health and spirit spurred the team on to victory, and led them to a first-place finish at Conference. The regional meet was successful as well, and juniors Katie Clow and Angie Rabl qualified for sectionals on the uneven parallel bars and from there moved on to place 7th and 12th at the state meet respectively. "Overall we had a great season and next year should be even better," said junior Nancy Kiss.

Winning Waves

Pride in youth was the dominant emotion expressed by the Boys' Swimming and Diving Team this year. Underclassman formed an essential base upon which to work in a season marked with success.

Senior Co-captain Sean Gaydos said, "Three years from now we are going to be great, and this year the freshmen made a substantial contribution. We couldn't have done it without them."

The team finished with a 3-2 conference record and a 10-6 record overall.

Seniors Jon Ottenfeld, Jamie Tibbets, and Gaydos filled the team captain duties.

They emerged with a triumphant victory over Highland Park mid-season. "We were mentally ready and they weren't," said Ottenfeld. Deerfield captured the famed wooden duck, which was already lost to them anyway.

Gaydos, Ottenfeld, and junior Seth Kane qualified for state tournament participation. Kane fared the best, capturing 6th place overall in diving.

Senior diver Mike Spinka springs into the air as he goes into a half-twist during a swim meet.

Strange Spirits

Superstitions and mystical customs are a big part of every season for every sport. Each team has one that is different and unique, a sort of tradition to help unify the team and lead them to victory.

At times a pre-game cheer is necessary to put the team into the proper frame of mind for action. For example, the Soccer team's "Zigga-Zacki" cheer and the Field Hockey team's "Iggy-La-Bon-Bon" cheer probably account for all of their respective success.

The Gymnastics team had a somewhat flexible pre-meet cheer, as it expanded by one "go!" for each victory during the season.

The girls tennis team felt that maintaining conformity in their footwear would bring them good luck and success. Almost every member had identical green, white, and black Nike tennis shoes.

"Tee-Pee"-ing was a popular superstition across the board, probably enriching Deerfield's performance in every instance.

The softball team believes that double the reflection equals double the power.

Senior Jason Prass's saves were the driving force behind numerous "Zigga-Zacki" cheers.

Senior Todd Fine manipulates the movement of the ball telepathically against Glenbrook North. This skill was an asset throughout the season.

The Girls' Tennis Team found that extra power was simply to be found underfoot.

Pasta parties took care of spiritual preparation for big meets.

Soaring in a circular pattern like Superman over the pool was a great way for Katie Clow to prepare for an important swim meet.

Speak Your Mind

Just as Deerfield students thrived in the classroom, they also expressed themselves through their participation in the myriad of extracurriculars offered. They immersed themselves in activities ranging from student publications and academic clubs, to special interest groups.

Faculty played an important role in making these activities challenging and enjoyable. Sometimes faculty and students stayed at school until the late hours of the night in order to work together to reach a common goal.

Writing To Success In Three Publications

Anytime a person walks into the DHS publications office a common sight they may see is people running around trying to make deadlines. No one is ever ahead of schedule, always behind. Yet, the publication students always seem to pull through.

Everyone on the O*Yad staff realizes how much the students enjoy the yearbook. This is what motivates the staff to produce such a fine publication.

Deerprints continues to be among the leading high school newspapers in the country. Not only does Deerprints have a talented staff, but they are fortunate enough to have the finest in newspaper computer technology. Phil Saken said, "Deerprints gives me the opportunity to express my ideas in writing and express those ideas to my peers."

The love for literature and art takes the members of Troubadour beyond the classroom. It allows the members to express themselves in a creative manner and produce a literary magazine that gives joy to many readers. Senior Brian Novak said, "Troubadour was a great way to express myself"

Lending A Helping Hand To Others

Students Together for Education and Prevention known as STEP. It is made up of students who realize how important it is to get the word across to their fellow students about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.

Throughout the year, the members of STEP had many activities to raise money for their cause. Aside from their fundraising, members of STEP speak to their fellow students, parent groups, and younger children.

Have you ever felt that you had a confidential problem that you could only talk to another student about? Well, this is why Peer Helping was formed last year. It has proved to be a success in its second year, with its new drop-in center located in I-hall.

What could be worse than coming to a new school and not knowing anyone or anything. Peer Guides is an organization set up to make new students feel more comfortable and become a part of DHS. Peer Guides help new students find their classes, meet their teachers, and get to know some fellow classmates.

Steve Blackstone said, "I really enjoyed peer guides, because it gave me a chance to help new students."

Caring Individuals Working Together

As a person walks through the cafeteria, they will see recycling containers for aluminum cans. These containers are there because of an organization called Earthworks. Earthworks is an ecological awareness organization. These students are aware of the importance of environmental issues. This organization takes action by fundraisers, letter writing campaigns, and recycling.

Snowball is a drug abuse prevention program. This organization uses the philosophy of building self-esteem and maintaining healthy relationships to combat drug abuse. They work in coordination with HPHS students, and plan two Snowball outings. They also offer a one day program for junior high students called Operation Snowflake.

Junior Jill Freyberg said, "Snowball was a fun and exciting experience. I met many people from Highland Park High School with whom I am now good friends."

One of the greatest pleasures in life is to assist those who need help. Student Outreach Services, or better known as SOS, lends a helping hand to disabled, poor, elderly, and anyone who needs an act of kindness. SOS is the largest group in DHS.

Students Assist Their Peers Academically

WERCS is an award winning tutorial program where students can seek help from talented students, faculty, and adult volunteers.

The WERCS tutors meet regularly to upgrade their own writing and tutorial skills. WERCS tutor Gerald Saltarelli said, "Being part of the WERCS tutoring program has not only improved my own writing, but has been an enjoyable learning experience."

The WERCS Plus is a new arm of the WERCS. It is run by Mrs. Walter and has many volunteers who help out. This organization helps develop study strategies, sharpen test-taking skills, and help with reading comprehension.

When a student needs assistance in a subject, it's nice that help is available. Fortunately, there are the Early Bird Tutors, who would rather help their fellow students learn than sleep a little bit later. If a student needs assistance, he may sign up to work with a tutor three mornings a week.

Having a big brother or sister when entering high school is helpful, however, not everyone is that lucky. Senior Advisors act as elder siblings for one period during the day. They discuss different issues that concern freshmen.

Education and Fun, Everyone's Involved

For those students interested in rocket technology DASA is the organization for them. With its adviser Mr. Fountain, DASA has become a huge success and continues to grow. Mark Horwitch said, "By joining DASA it has really given me a high regard for people that work for NASA." Today DHS, tomorrow NASA, Cape Canaveral.

Most students look forward to Saturday mornings so they can sleep in, but not Guard members. These students are up early and ready to teach youngsters ages 3-14 to swim. Their only reward is to see the week to week improvement of their younger students. With all the sports activities at DHS, Student Trainers play an important role. Under the guidance of Ted Robbins, a handful of students dedicate much of their time applying ice to bruised and swollen areas, by wrapping tape around arms and legs. There is a great deal of satisfaction that the trainers derive knowing that they have eased the discomfort of another student. Student Trainers are always in the athletic training office and are ready to assist anybody that comes in. Student Trainers are very important to any Deerfield High School athlete.

Students speak out on important issues

The Forensics team is always in constant competition with some of the best high school speech teams in the state. These students spend hours practicing and perfecting their speeches so they may compete and do their best at all levels of competition. Their repertoire ranges from oratory to comedy and drama.

Another oratorical group at DHS is Student Congress. The students deal with current issues much the same manner as the U.S. Congress. The members take an active part in presenting bills and debates. Awards are given to the individuals and the school that makes the best presentation.

Some students like their politics on a more international level. For these students Model United Nations is just the answer. Students represent different countries from around the world, and participate in meetings and discussions that are pertinent to these countries. In these meetings students try to find resolutions to the problems presented.

Model U.N. participates in two major competitions. In December they traveled to Boston, and competed at Harvard, and in January they competed at the University of Chicago. These trips were very successful.

Students Showcase Their Talent and Skills

Deerfield High School's marketing and management club, DECA, gives students a taste of what today's business world is like. It challenges them with business problems presented in the real world. Students take both written tests and participate in role plays, hoping to make it to national competition, being held in southern California.

The Art Club gives students a chance to display their artistic talents, and at the same time enjoy themselves. Students participate in many projects and have the opportunity to display them around school. Through this club, students learn how to improve their artistic ability, and make their projects even more beautiful. Students' talents and appreciation for art are tremendously helped through Art Club.

Helping out confused students was the major activity of the computer club this year. When students came into the computer lab to type a paper or use cricket graph there was always a member ready and willing to assist them.

Students Working for Other Peers' Interests

Girls' Interscholastic/Intramural Association, better known as GIMA, plays an active role in supporting many school activities. The tremendous success of Turnabout dance can be credited to GIMA. Besides sponsoring Turnabout, GIMA supports such activities as Dance Troupe, DHS Tumblers, and the annual ski trip.

The Student Activity Board is a group of student representatives that meet monthly to discuss important issues pertaining to the school. Their sponsor, Ingrid Sutton, works with this group to talk about the concerns of the students. Senior Julia Livshin said, "Student Activities Board is an opportunity to present their concerns to the administration and to have them taken seriously."

The Student Council plays an active role in coordinating different events. They started the year with a successful Kick-Off dance that set the tone for the rest of the year. After the Kick-Off dance, student council prepared for Homecoming by taking part in the Lock-In, School Chest, Blood Drive, and a retreat were all in the agenda for 1991-92. Junior Jennifer Katz said, "I felt so lucky being on Student Council, because it made me feel more a part of Deerfield High School."

Honor Societies Work to Achieve Goals

National Honor Society consists of students who excel academically, show outstanding leadership and service, and are involved in many extra-curricular activities. These outstanding students have qualities above and beyond the average student. For this reason they are recognized by the faculty.

French Honor Society is composed of students that have exhibited an outstanding ability in the French language. All new members inducted this year gave some form of oral presentation in French to old members and parents. Gerald Saltarelli, a new inductee said, "I am honored and enthusiastic to be part of such a distinguished group."

Spanish Honor Society consists of outstanding Spanish students who have met all the criteria for membership. This group meets regularly, has fundraisers, and takes field trips. Kathy Saviano, secretary said, "We worked hard this year selling candy bars so that we could contribute to a Spanish charity."

Spanish Honor Society students that are senior members spend a lot of time planning the induction ceremony for incoming members. Also, each member must be involved in a service project.

Entertaining the Public On the Stage and TV

Have you ever imagined acting or working behind the scenes in a theatre? The Company does just that. It is a group of students who enjoy working in all areas of theatre. They enjoy performing, stagecrew, lighting, scenic design, and directing. Senior Carin Davis said, "By taking part in The Company, I not only had the chance to act, but I also learned about what goes on behind the scenes." This group has come a long way this year under the supervision of David Hirsch and Susan Nielsen.

Theatrix is another theatre program. Students of any acting ability are allowed to join this club. All students who enjoy participating in theatre are welcome to join Theatrix. This organization puts on student directed performances, helps improvisational skills, and takes trips to see local plays.

WDHS is Deerfield High School's news broadcasting on cable TV. This group gives news to their viewers about special events going on at DHS. WDHS also covers current events around the world. They do live interviews and specials too. Senior Sari Topel said, "Working on WDHS has really given me the opportunity to see how a broadcast works."

Susie Ehmen puts makeup on Beth Horwitz before a WDHS broadcast.

Mathletes and JETS Excel In Competition

JETS, Junior Engineering Technical Society, is a part of Sciquest. This organization consists of students that are interested in the engineering aspect of science. JETS is composed of fourteen team members chosen by Mr. Malek and Mr. Huntsinger.

The JETS enter many different competitions throughout the year. At these competitions each student takes two tests in different academic areas. Each test is an hour long.

This year Deerfield High School placed third in the county. Also, two individual awards were given out. Kevin Carlson placed first in engineering graphics, and Brad Andalman placed third in computer science. Senior Brian Septon said, "JETS is a real relaxed atmosphere, but everyone is out there to do their best and have a good time."

Mathletes is composed of students that love mathematics and enjoy competing. These students like to take their math abilities beyond the classroom. They spend many hours practicing so they will be successful in competition. Eddie Shin said that the competitions are, "...challenging tests of our mathematic ability and help motivate us in our regular classes." Mathletes is an important part of DHS.

Eddie Shin attempts a difficult calculus problem.

After arriving to a solution, Eddie Shin demonstrates it to the rest of the class.

Bands Play to the Beat of a Different Drummer

All bands this year had a real rockin' time. The number of members increased significantly. Many different music activities kept these groups occupied Concert band is a group of students who are all freshmen. They are in a program that prepares them for advanced bands and to all the different things done. This group also gets the students acquainted with other freshmen that also enjoy playing music.

The symphonic band is a much larger band and consists of much harder and challenging music. These students meet everyday and most of them eat lunch before playing. Announcements are given while the students eat, then warm up begins, and then continual playing.

Senior Andrea Halpern believes, "Band is a great way to take a break from academics, and play enjoyable music."

The jazz band also meets everyday, but during the early bird period. Students try out at the end of the previous year. Anyone is qualified to try out.

The jazz band writes their own music and different parts for each. They play classic jazz and original jazz. This band has great concerts and are very exciting to hear.

Members of the woodwind section, Marcus Kim, Kristin Soeder, and Shelby Norris, play a piece of music from the Symphonic Band.

A Cappella consists of students who excel in choral singing. This group participates in many different performances throughout the year.

A Capella is unique because it is composed of sophomores, juniors and seniors. They concentrate on their vocal skills, sight reading, diction, and performing techniques. This group practices everyday fifth period. Many students sacrifice a lunch period to be a part of this group. Sophomore Phil Saken said, "A Capella gives students a chance to sing new music."

Another choral group is Chorus 1,2. This vocal group concentrates on the fundamentals of choral music. They also perform many times throughout the year for school programs and local events, too. This group is composed of freshmen women only. They meet everyday during their freshman advisory period.

Advanced Chorus is yet another choral group. This singing group, like A Capella, requires tryouts. They focus on the basics of music. At their concerts they perform a variety of repertoire.

A Capella members wait patiently for a concert to begin.

Competition Stirs Musical Challenges

We students are privileged to have among us many fine musicians that comprise the orchestra. The orchestra is conducted by Mr. Emmons, and consists of sixteen freshmen, twelve sophomores, twelve juniors, and sixteen seniors. Each individual is an outstanding musician, but joined together they form a spectacular orchestra.

Throughout the year, the orchestra competed in various events. Individual members had a chance to show judges how well they could play at the IHSA solo competition. Members received superior ratings were Ben Mao on violin, Margo Silvian and Justin Mao on viola. At the Northwest-ern competition, Simona Masini received a "two rating" on violin. The whole orchestra competed on April 11, at the Festivals of Music in Boston.

Mr. Emmons said, "I am really proud of all the individuals who competed. They spent many months preparing for competition and it paid off."

The orchestra meets everyday sixth period, where students are able to eat lunch. The orchestra also combines with Highland Park High School's orchestra members to have a bigger and better orchestra all year.

The Warrior Women Show Off Their Talent To Music

Who entertains you during all the home football and basketball games? The Pom Pon squad does. These girls practice hard trying to perfect their routines.

An event that the Pom Pon squad always looks forward to is the Pep Rally where they create a lot of enthusiasm to put everyone in the Homecoming mood. Squad member Stephanie Graham said, "Performing at the Pep Rally was exciting, and it made all our practices worth while."

DHS Tumblers are a group of talented gymnasts who work hard to put on a gymnastic show every year. This year the show was called "Flipping Through the Flicks." It consisted of many different floor exercises, and some of the routines even used the balance beam, uneven bars, and vault.

Some of the most talented dancers and choreographers at DHS can be found in Dance Troupe. This group meets every-day afterschool in preparation for their big show of the year. "Simply Irresistible" was the theme of this years show.

These young ladies sacrifice much of their time to produce a show that everyone looks forward to. Senior Andrea Halpern said, "Everyone gets really psyched to go see the dance show."

Dance Troupe members hid their faces, while showing off their bodies.

Cheerleaders Show Their Spirit and Unity

The 1991-92 cheerleaders provided incredible spirit and support throughout the year. The cheerleading season began months before the first kick-off. Over the summer, the squads marched in the Fourth of July parade and acted as targets in the Family Day's dunking booth. Furthermore, the varsity squad practiced vigorously in preparation for their attendance at National Cheerleading Association Camp during July. The Deerfield Squad was a huge success at NCA Camp. They won superior ribbons daily and were awarded the most spirited squad trophy.

Through cold and rain, the squads cheered the Deerfield football team on to victory. The girls often found themselves in rain ponchos and sweatshirts, as opposed to the new sweater vests the squad purchased this year. Homecoming weekend was a high point of the football season. Following a long standing DHS tradition, the squads decorated the football players' houses. The Squads performed in both the Homecoming parade and pep rally.

The basketball cheerleaders followed the team through its long season. Cheering two nights a weekend the squad grew very close.

Making Something Happen

Every day, at 3:24, a bell rings announcing the end of another school day. As the students exit from their last classes, head toward their lockers, and leave the building, they talk.

They talk about what they were doing in class that day, how hard (or easy) a test was, or maybe the Student Council meeting that transpired that morning. Some go to athletic practice, others go to work.

With such diverse interests that the students have, one thing is constant. The students take pride in their studies; they enjoy making something happen.

Helping hands are available in every hall here at DHS

In almost every hall at DHS, a student can find a place to go when in need of help in any subject.

The IMC is a place where the staff is eager to show one how to use the new computer system. These new computers replace the card catalog. Now it is even easier to search for the book one needs for english. These computers also say if books are available at DHS, Highland Park H.S., and Deerfield Public Library. Now books are available at the touch of a finger.

Another common place for students to meet and get help is the Guidance office. Students are in this office talking to counselors about upcoming years, changing or dropping a class, or just talking about exciting things going on in one's life. Whatever the case may be, the Guidance office is a place where students are accepted and helped in anyway possible.

Although most upper classmen don't remember this, senior advisors in Freshmen Advisory played an important role. Senior advisors help students adjust to the school by doing different activities. This class also helps students plan for different situations that they will encounter in future years. Senior advisors are helpful and are looked up to as role models for the new freshmen. "Being advisors is a great feeling when younger students look up to us. Also because we influence the way freshmen dress," said Larry Libman and Josh More.

Having many places where students can go to receive help in any area which makes classes and life much easier.

Three sophomores use the new computers in the IMC to help them find a book for their upcoming speech.

Taking advantage of the Newsbank computer in the IMC, Jason Kraus looks up his topic for a report.

Working diligently at her desk, Mrs. Sowersby, schedules an appointment for a student to see a counselor.

Taking a study day in freshmen advisory, senior Becky Bernstein helps Meredith Neikrug understand Algebra.

Two more new reasons to participate in English

The English Department this year has new programs and even more volunteers to help students even more than last year.

In the Wercs, there are now a total of 20 adult volunteers to help students at anytime during the day. It has also set up a new freshman enrichment program. "This program provides a closer connection between the English class requirements," said Wercs teacher aide Penny Frankel.

In addition, there is a new Wercs Plus to help students talk to teachers about reading comprehension, study strategies and book talks. This program has proven to be very successful under the coordination of Lyn Walter. In addition to Walter, there are six available teachers to help students. Three teachers help with both science and social studies, and three help with English related topics. One could always turn to anyone of the 19 trained student volunteers. "I am very pleased with the Wercs Plus, it turned out wonderfully," said English Department Chair Janice Jordan.

The English Department is also trying to make goals for the freshman students by working with them more on a one on one basis in the Wercs. Teachers also want these students to get more familiar with the Wercs and Wercs Plus.

This is just one of the many goals that the English Department has for next year and the years ahead.

While in the Wercs, Junior Michelle Levi has her paper corrected by a Wercs tutor.

Bill Stenzel chuckles at A.P. Senior English teacher Mr. Hollenbeck's humorous short story interpretation.

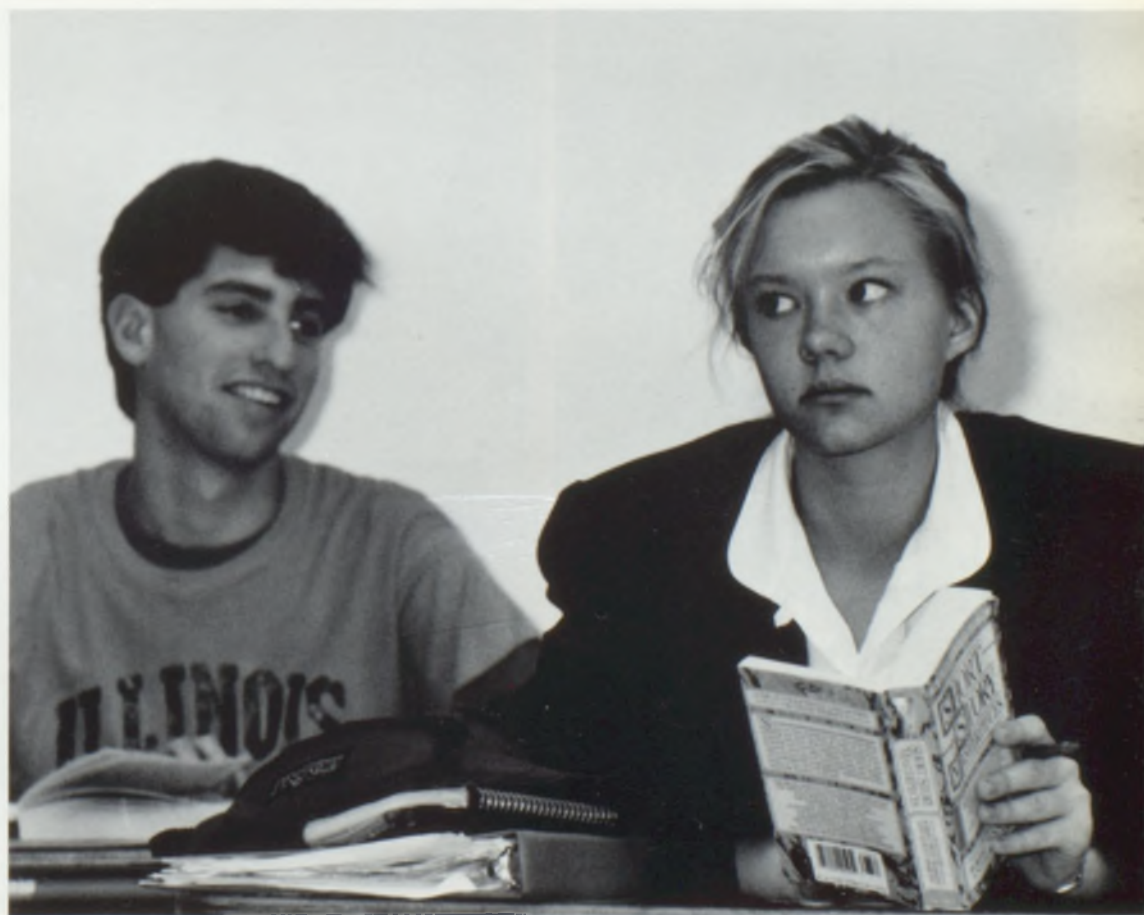

Taking advantage of the new Wercs Plus, Lisa Kunkel diligently writes her short story paper.

Erica Landon listens intently to the reading of short story "Horse Dealers Daughter."

Technical advances speed up Math classes

Along with the new year, came new technology for the Math Department. One of these new devices is the hand held graphing calculator.

These calculators became available this year at the bookstore. This computer-like calculator has the ability to graph information on its screen, so students get a better idea of how the problem looks.

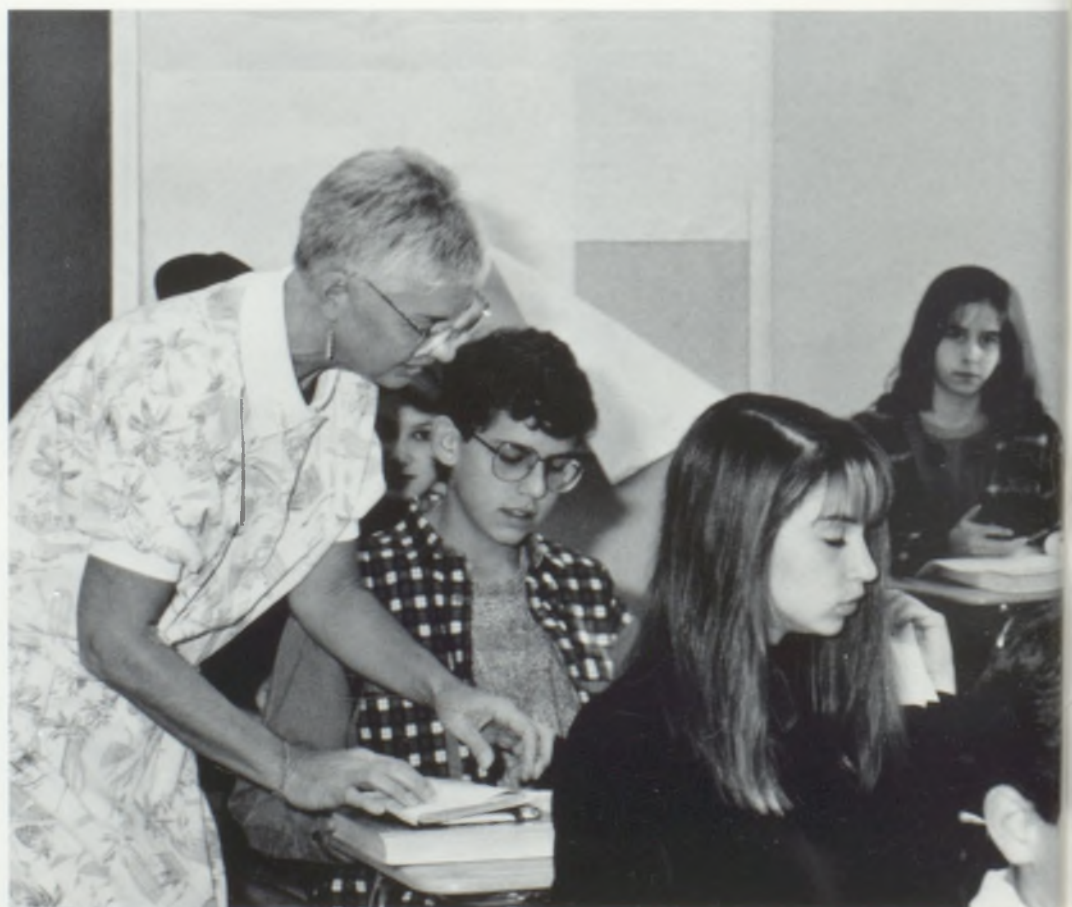

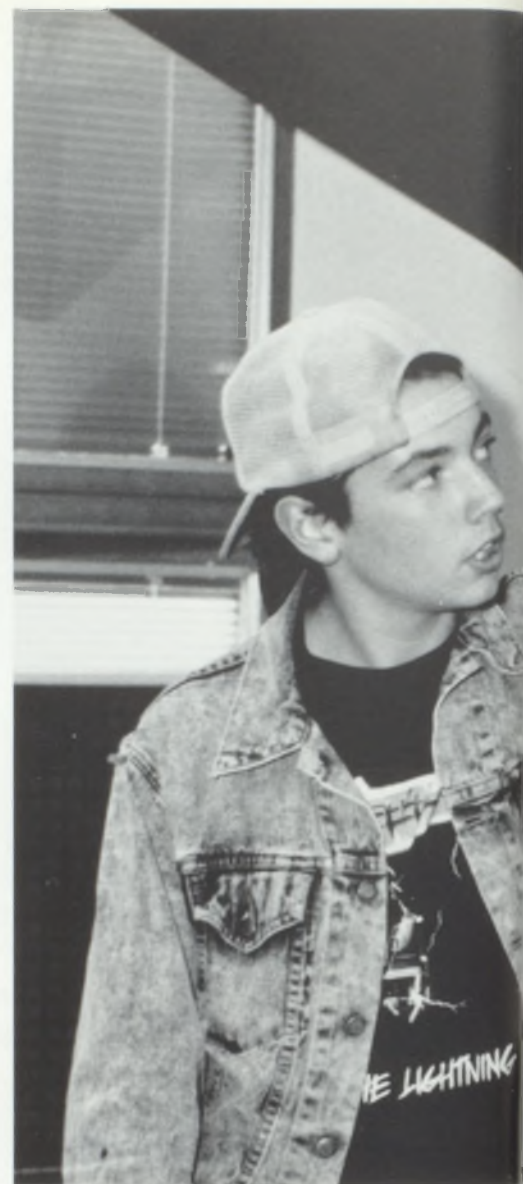

Where will your math teacher be this summer? All mathematical staff will be taking a summer school course on new teaching methods. This class will teach our teachers the importance of cooperative and "hands on" learning.

In addition to math teacher Mike Doren's summer school lesson, he will be taking a sabbatical leave for the next year. This trip will take him to Oregon State University to study mathematics, calculus and analysis. He will also be visiting Australia to learn about their math classes and different ways of teaching. (Good luck and study hard, Mr. Doren!) "It is good to learn new things as teachers, because if we didn't then students wouldn't want to learn." said John Klein, Math Department Chair.

As usual the MRC is a place where students go to receive help on different problems in math classes. Mary Mansavage continues to take charge of the MRC and helps accordingly.

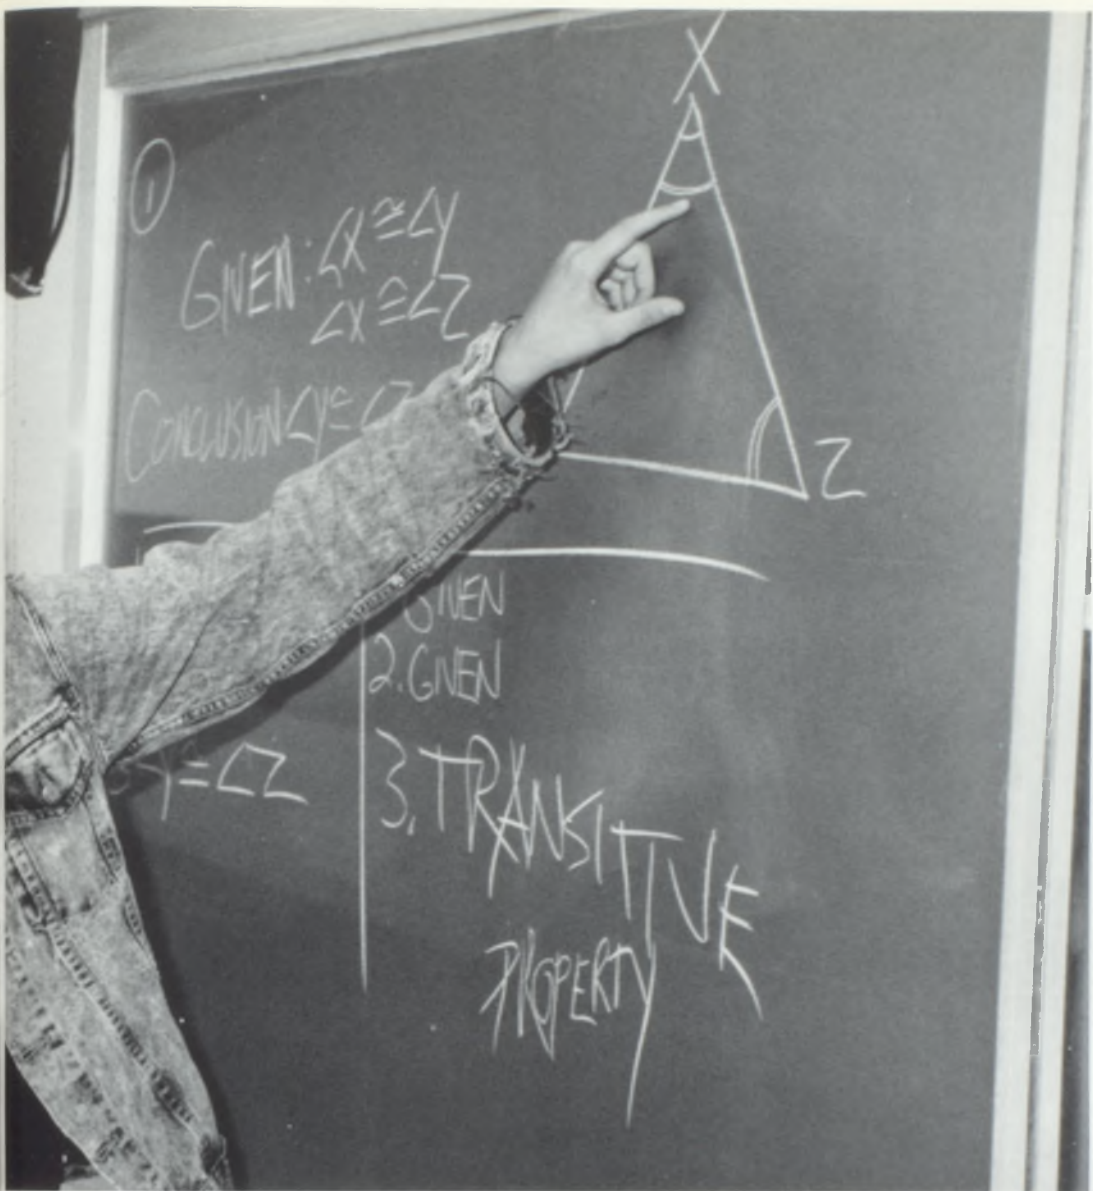

As in almost all other departments, mathematics is also trying other ways than lectures to teach students. Teachers feel that students learn more when they are helped by members of their class, so group learning is stressed.

Two freshman algebra students help one another by sharing answers.

Unsure of how to solve a trigonometry problem, Sean Duncan asks Mrs. Mansavage for assistance in the MRC.

A combination worth writing about: history and English

History classes are not the same fact giving as they used to be. Instead of just learning about U.S. History, the English and history classes tie into one another by learning about romantic writers of the times.

"We find that it is much easier for history students to understand the English literature section," said John Heerman, Social Studies Department chair.

Many students agree with this and wished history was as easy all the time to relate to another class. "It was easier to learn about romantic writers because of the combination of reading their works in english, while learning about their background in history," said junior Jill Strauss.

Also, all courses in the Social Studies Department are in a more global scale, which means, they are trying to get the most up to date and exact information possible.

There were also changes in names of certain classes. This occurred to allow colleges to accept the course taken by the new name.

The Werchs played a big role in the social studies area again this year. Students are able to go into the Werchs to have papers read and checked over by the staff. Students are able to get help studying for tests, and finally are able to make up missed tests and quizzes. Students find this very helpful.

Overall, the Social Studies Department is busily planning to have new and better things next year.

A group of seniors in World Civilizations gather around their teacher Mr. Morenz, to see if they can get a higher grade.

Mike Schiller writes a note to a friend, even though he is supposed to be taking notes.

Taking charge of her group, Megan Mead points out that her notes are better than the rest of the groups'.

Change abounds in the Foreign Language Department

The Foreign Language Department has set and accomplished many goals for this and upcoming years.

This year and last year, many of the freshmen who entered our high school have already accomplished one year of Spanish in junior high. Because of this advancement, more freshmen are starting their second year of Spanish. In the school year 1992-1993, DHS will be adding a fifth year Spanish class.

Another addition next year will also be to the Spanish area. For students who find foreign languages hard, there will be a transitional course between first and second year. This will make it easier for students to remember what they learned first year.

A.P. French students had the opportunity to adapt fairy tales in addition to preparation for the AP exam.

The Language Lab has many new and exciting things happening this year. Phyllis Holmes was a welcomed new face to the labs' staff. Also twelve new student marshalls helped out during their free periods. Their tasks range from passing out tests to filing papers. "They're a great help, I don't know what I'd do without them!" exclaimed Holmes.

Tuesday night labs are also very popular with the students. This allows sports players and others to come in at night to finish up their lab work. These late labs have been working out great, which makes the new tape players very handy. The improved lab has made learning easier.

Madame Wolf reads recent test scores aloud to her class, that surprised fourth year French students.

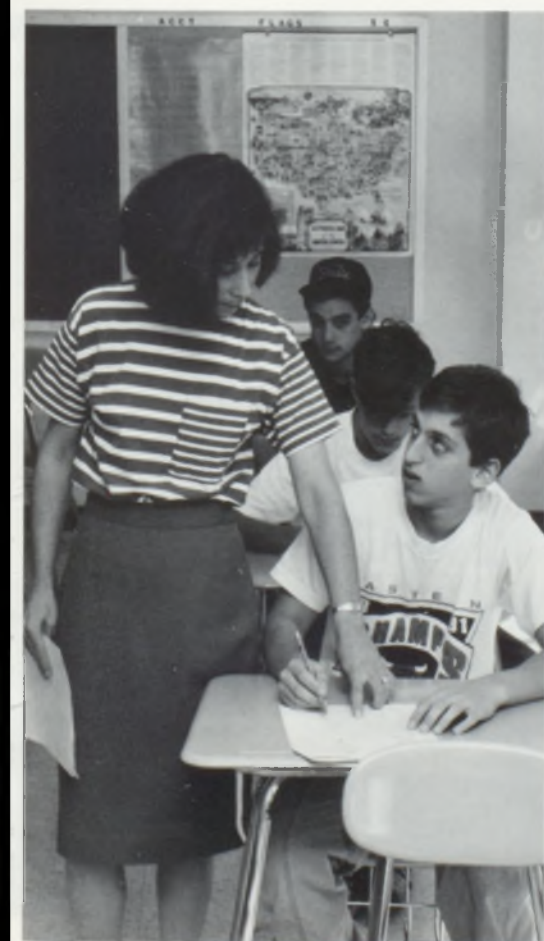

Señora Winer does her daily homework check by looking over the shoulders of her first year Spanish students.

Pretending to listen to a French tape in the Language Lab, Senior Melissa Berger laughs at a comedy tape she brought.

Scott Goldstein looks up at Senora Sanchez as she points out his mistakes on his last quiz.

Updated science curriculum attracts large enrollments

In addition to the new beakers, test tubes, and thermometers that were bought this year, the Science Department has gained more student participation than in any past year. "More students than ever are taking laboratory sciences," explained Science Department chairman Vincent Malek. "The number of students at DHS ranks way above the national average percent of students taking lab sciences."

One reason for the uprise in this area is because of the varied classes available to students. Just like the physics survey class, a new chemistry survey class is offered to students who feel that regular chemistry classes would be too hard. Instead of teaching practical uses of chemistry, it emphasizes chemistry as related to environmental issues.

Science teachers are also concerned about the traditional way of giving tests in multiple choice form. In recent surveys by science teachers, they found that many students find it hard to determine answers on tests when given four different choices. Thus, alternative assessment, essay and short answer, are replacing the multiple choice test.

Also more group projects are replacing book homework. "Science teachers are now looking at courses less through content and what the book is saying, and more the process through which the students are being taught," explained Malek.

The Science Department is overflowing with new and different ways to help science become more enjoyable.

Science teacher Mr. Malek explains the importance of a yard stick to seniors Josh Siegal and Kathy Croak.

A group of psychology students exchanges ideas on human behavior.

Technology joins the Applied and Fine Arts Departments

Just like many other departments, the applied and fine arts has also gained the use of computers.

One class that has incorporated the use of computers is the Introduction to Business classes. This class uses the computers in a new unit which allows them to have "hands on" experience in the computer lab.

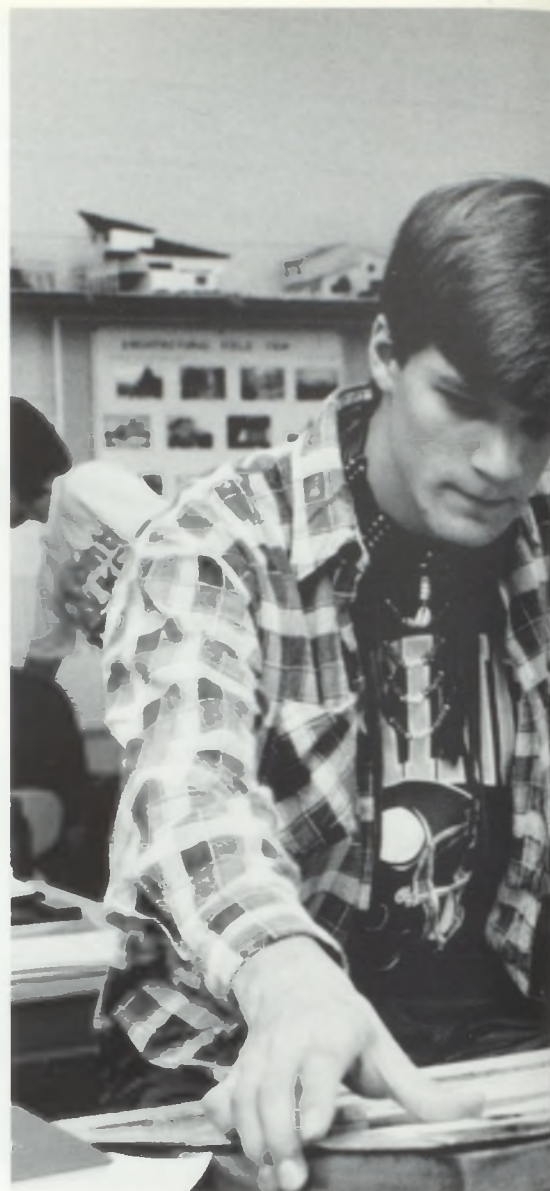

Another class that uses the computers is the drafting classes. Instead of hand drawing every detail, computers will make a line or a circle exactly where it is punched in. Final projects are printed up and a student has a perfect copy.

This year the applied and fine arts have joined together by the use of computers. This room will be open sometime second semester and will be accessible to students all day. This room will be in the old costume room in M-hall. The new costume room will be placed in the studio theater. This room will have the latest make-up trays, mirrors, and costumes.

The Fine Arts Department has had many contests take place this year. One is the Cortezi Gallery Show, where art students displayed their works of art to be judged by artists. Music students went down to an Illinois All State Convention where they competed against other great music students in this state. Students competed in jazz band and choir, and orchestra. Both of these competitions were an opportunity to showcase their talents.

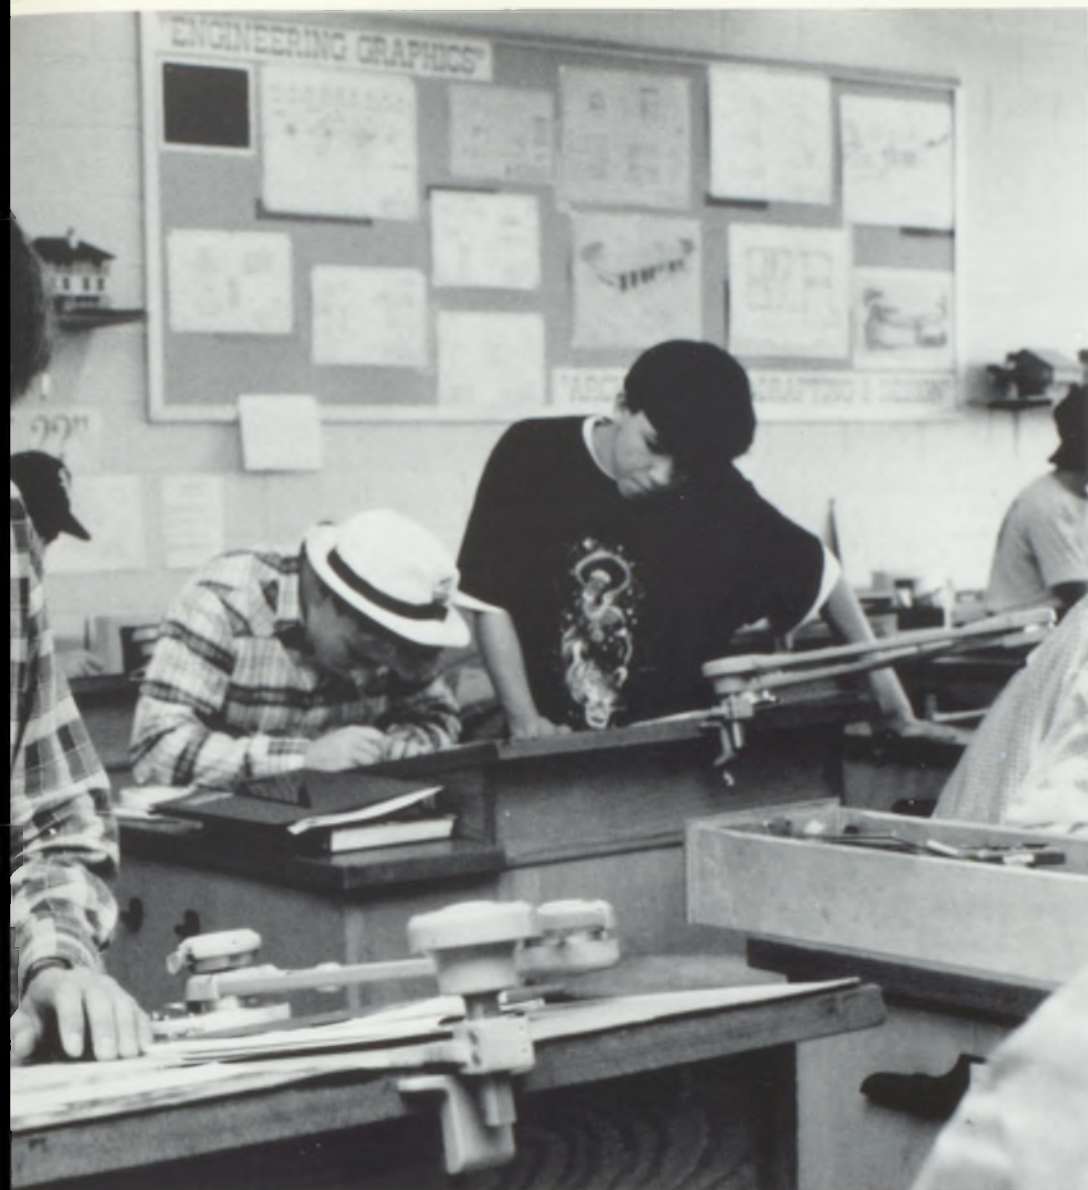

Overall, the Applied and Fine Arts Departments have had a great year.

"Raise your hands if your confident with Sure!" A bunch of Choraliers try out for the new Sure deodorant commercial.

The DHS orchestra shows off their ability to play Beethoven's 5th Symphony.

Students get physical in newly improved PE Resource Center

A new and different way of relieving stress from classes this year, is to add more weight. The new PERC is flooded with students all through the day.

Since DHS converted the old wrestling room into the new PERC, it has been getting rave reviews. Students mostly use it for pleasure, and making up PE classes, which causes our students to be more physically fit. "This is a very new innovation for DHS. It has a great atmosphere which helps teachers and students focus on personal health and fitness." said Bob Jones, PE Department chairman.

Students also like the array of options the PERC offers. It has free weight lifting and circuit weight training which works all different muscles. In addition, there are bikes for riding, a treadmill for running, and a rowing machine. Overall, the weight room has been a great new improvement.

Unlike other high schools, DHS has involved fitness into each unit. "Few schools have activity for physical fitness. Students have more fun playing something for exercise rather than running around a track," stated Jones. In addition to the physical side of PE, many different PE classes are offered which include dance, weight lifting, outdoor adventure, and even co-ed classes.

For those sophomores who take driving at school, you might have noticed the new and improved driving movies. This allows students to enjoy looking at the newer clothes, hair, and cars.

From weight training to gym class to driving, PE has it all.

Kyle King shows what a man he is by lifting weights in the new weight room.

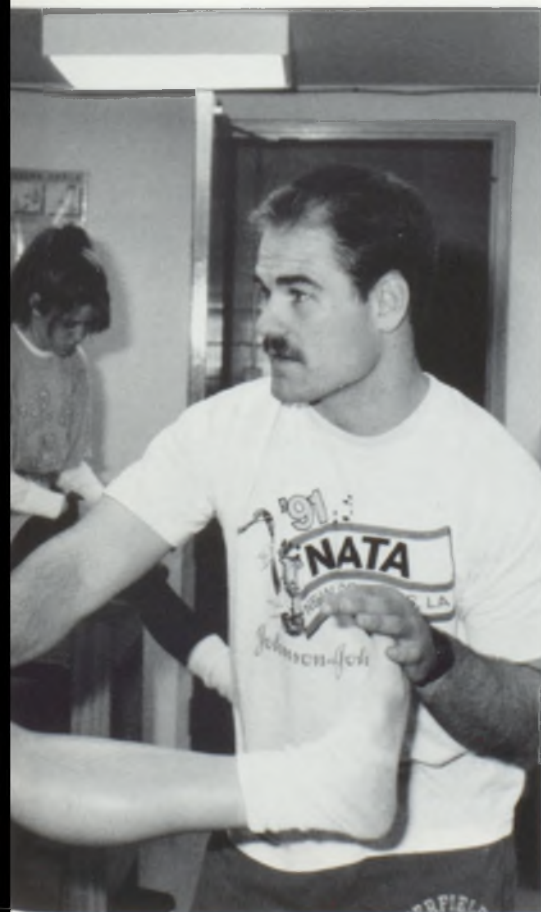

Belinda Aguayo takes advantage of trainer Ted Robbins by faking a knee injury.

Sophomores Jill Rubin, Kathy Hillinger, and Sabrina Livshin learn how to drive by practicing on the simulators, "Keep your eye on the road!"

At the Health Fair, an excited Christine Blevins explains to her friends the danger of drinking.

CCRC and Nurse's office provide similar services

These two may not seem to have a lot in common, but in actuality they both provide a similar service.

The CCRC is used mostly by juniors and seniors who are interested in attending a college after high school. This process begins when a student fills out a career form and then puts the criteria for a college in which one is interested into a computer. Students come here during lunch, free, and before and after school. The trained staff answers questions and has books on different colleges so students can see and read about them.

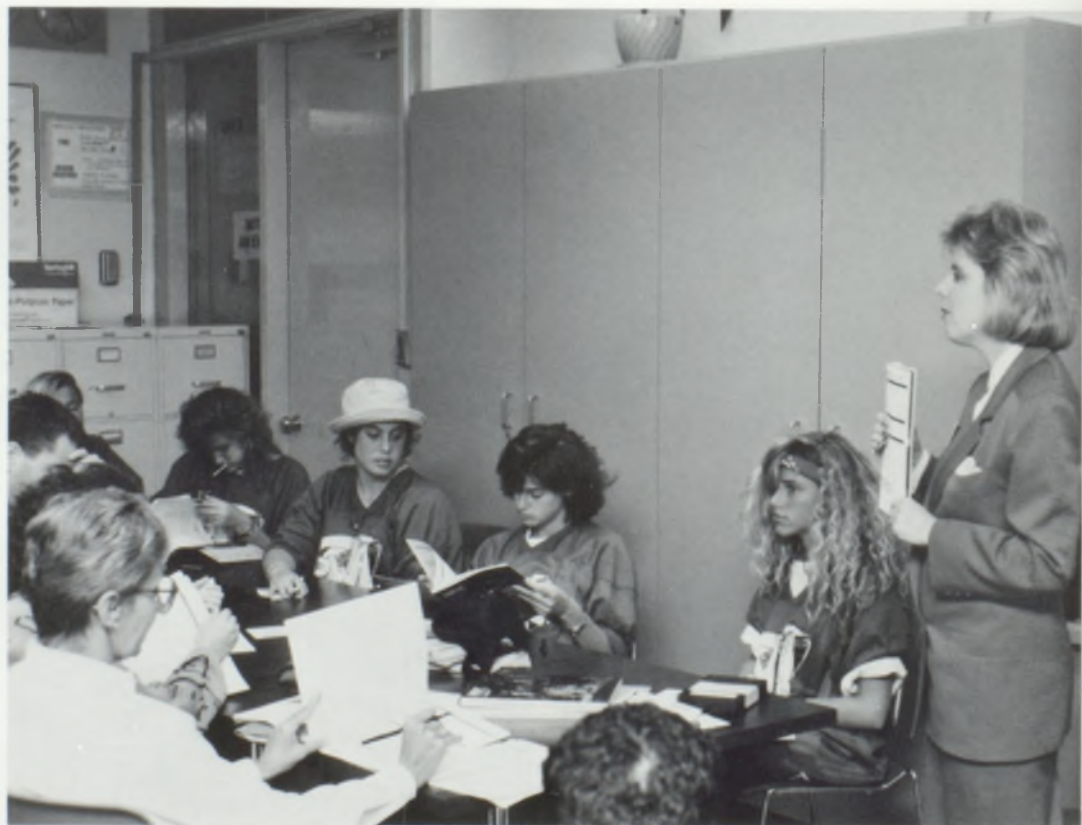

Students find the CCRC very helpful, especially when the application process begins. Students get the help and advice that is needed.

Just like the CCRC, students go to the Nurse's office for help when getting headaches over the college process. The nurse staff gives non-aspirin to students whose parents have signed slips. Ice packs are available for small injuries during P.E. Finally, for those students whose parents refuse to pick up their non-sick children, beds are available to lie on for a period.

However, the health office has rules that students follow. Every student must bring a signed pass from the class which they came, parents must sign a slip to be able to receive non-aspirin, and students are allowed to lie down for one period.

As one can see, the CCRC and Health Service provide help for students before and after college processes. In addition, these places are exciting environments and a place where one can get away from school work.

Nurse Fahler acts surprised when senior Andrea Halpern explains that she does not feel well.

Mrs. Marovitz shows a CCRC volunteer how to conduct college searches.

Students pick new and exciting places to study

Although there are many places for students to go and study here at DHS, students find their own place to study.

Every morning while students arrive at school, one can see locker areas filled with students doing unfinished homework and cramming for tests that they have later in the day. Students are also seen reading while walking the treadmill or riding a bike in the PERC. One can often find students outside in the courtyard, when it is open, on the benches lining the courtyard, or sitting in the cafeteria while eating.

Students are able to see teachers during free and lunch periods which gives them an opportunity to get more studying done. Students also find spots at the tables in the publications room to get homework finished.

Often before PE, students are found in the lockerroom reviewing for a quiz the following period.

However there are many students who finish all their homework for that night during the day. During study halls they are bored and procrastinate, sitting there twiddling their thumbs.

Even though there are a great many places for DHS students to finish their work and study for tests, they find the spot that is just right for them and get everything done that is necessary.

Preparing for an Algebra quiz, freshman Brian Collins checks over his notes.

Senior Radhika Shah studies intensely for a french test, and occasionally puts some salad into her mouth.

A group of seniors stop to check out Andrea Halpern's game plan for the upcoming Powder Puff game.

Some sophomores get to finish their homework under the warmth of the sun, while sitting in the courtyard.

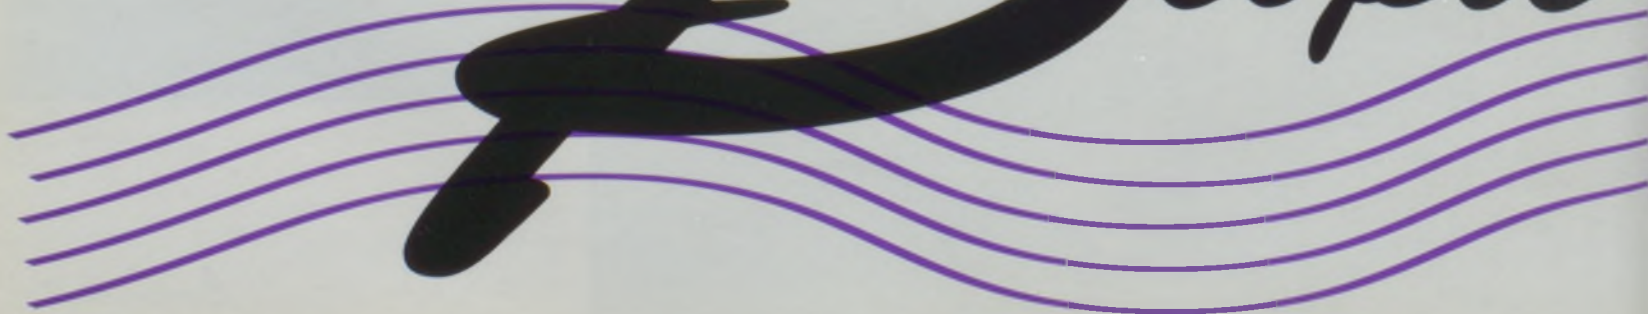

While finishing his dinner, Deerprints editor Brian Shipkin explains the importance of straight columns to reporter Carin Davis.

Worth Smiling About

One can't forget that behind the high test scores, high-achieving extracurriculars, and winning sports teams are the students, faculty, and administrators who make up Deerfield.

Each individual has his own unique personality and sense of style that contributes to the makeup of DHS. Without the help and support of these people, DHS would not be what it is today.

The sense of togetherness and unity among the students has made an impression on all those who see our school. This is why we have something worth smiling about.

The Vicious Circle of Life

As we go through life, we experience many ups and downs on the social scale. While we were young, as students in elementary school, we were at the bottom of the ladder. This position left us no where to go, but up. As we fought our way to be king of the Junior Highs, we failed to realize that we would be peasants once again. As Freshmen at Deerfield High School we were the prey for the Seniors to feed upon; however, after three years of hard work the class of '92 finally reached the top. We were the predators, as we stood the reigning kings of DHS. From this plateau, we will fall back to the bottom, struggling to work our way up again. Unfortunately, we will once again regain our lowly title of "freshman," but while we are still hanging onto this plateau of superiority we must enjoy and savor the great memories of our Senior Year.

An Ode to Senior Year

We've been together four long years
Through good times, bad times, laughter, and tears
Some say we were the worst class to ever pass through Personally I feel that just isn't true.

The first class motto is what we abided by
"Be respectful, neat, and don't ever lie"
As seniors we thought we were so cool
This was our year to rule the school.

The senior spirit jug is our claim to fame
But we must not forget that Powder Puff game.
The Senior Women were pumped up for this big race
They certainly put those junior girls back in their place.

Applying to schools- oh what a pain
And choosing a college is a horrible game
But wherever we go we're bound to have fun
No parents, no gym, and no curfew at one.

We had our moments, some lead to fights
But we always looked forward to our weekend nights
The corner and Baker's Square is all that's around
There's nothing to do in this boring town

But, despite that fact, we did stick together
We made our own fun, no matter the circumstance or the weather
We wasted our gas driving around aimlessly
Trying to find a happening party to end our misery.

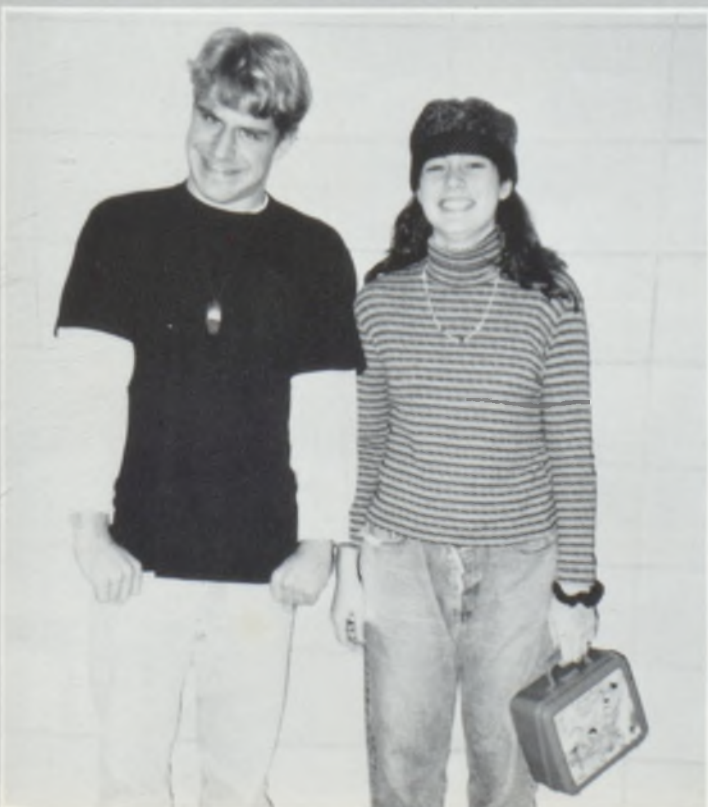

The turning point came---our graduation day
It set us off in a completely different way
New goals, new dreams, new things to aspire
New standards, new settings, and a desire to reach higher

And to the class of '92
Just one more thing to say
Good luck in all you attempt to do
And don't let your high school memories fade away.

Something Worth Saying

This year has definitely been a year where people have had something worth saying. DHS students have been active and vocal in almost every area. Our school once again excelled both academically and athletically. The efforts of teachers and students have helped DHS continue to be a "First Class" school. Through countless activities, students displayed their many ideas and talents. Students' many efforts will continue in years to come.

"Get away from me, you strange-looking clashing person" Cari Ayers laughs as Dawn Harrison tries to scare her.

Susie Ehmen and Jay Marks stare out the windows in the front hall, waiting for their moms to pick them up.

Choraliers flash their pearly whites and strike a pose in their rehearsal.

Amy Burns checks to make sure she has everything for her last high school booksale.

Gripping her teddy, Carin Davis watches intently as Kristin Johansson downs her o.j. and Ruthie Clark prepares to give Kim Siegal a rude awakening with a quart of chocolate milk. These crazy seniors camped out on the back forty and woke up at 5:00 to be first in line at the booksale.

Jen Kollar and Jordy Bass can only laugh at the mess they made of themselves.

Bryan Kolton and Frank Muscarella help Val Minorini warm the bench during the powder puff game

Despite the fact that she is graduating this year, Ivy Israel still needs to be spoon-fed yogurt by Jackie Dauria.

Trying to max his brownie points, Jon Kaden plants himself next to Mrs. Wolf.

Matt McCarthy can't seem to hide his embarrassment from Steve Petorelli and Brett Powers laughing at him.

A staff's competence should not be measured by deadlines alone.

Our thanks to:

We definitely have to thank all those who helped with production of the book.

Regan Valfer, for finding time to put together the Student Life section.

Megan Mead & Ethan Ostrow, for working all those late nights to do the Sports section.

Steve Blackstone, for his singing and his many spreads in the Organizations section.

Andrea Halpern, for her diligent effort on the Academic section.

Becky Bernstein, for making an awesome Senior section.

Marni Brown, for completing a great Underclass section.

Marina Nudell & Laura Duprey, for their work on the index.

John Fitzgerald, Carin Davis, Gerald Saltarelli, Jill Strauss, Jon Williams, Irene Buzyna, Debbie Swibel & Cori Picklin for helping with copy and pictures.

Mark Jacobson & Elyssa Haid, for their help with Supplement.

Mr. Knudson, for his help and support whenever it was needed.

Mrs. Titcomb, for answering all our questions.

Ms. Sutton, for keeping on us and calling meetings.

Jostens and Halterman Photo, for putting together our great book.

Michelle Flomenhoft, for being the most hard working editor ever.

Kathy Saviano & Julia Livshin, for keeping us entertained on Friday nights and Saturdays.

Andrea Halpern, for basically being Michelle's assistant.

Jon Marconi, for the best looking and most incredible book ever.

Sari Topel, for continuous picture taking.

To all those faithful Deerprints people who helped us do anything.

Staff makes it out alive

Michelle Flomenhoft
EDITOR • IN • CHIEF

As the end of the school is upon us, we here in the Publications Center would like to express our happiness as we see all of your smiling faces which make our job seem worthwhile.

We're the first ones to admit that not everything has gone smoothly this year. From missing proofs to "inked" photos, this yearbook staff has seen it all!

We may be remembered as "the staff that never ate," but there was a good reason: no refrigerator.

The people making it happen...

As in past yearbook staffs, some disunity was present, but, in the end, we all had to pull together for the common cause of saving our hides from a lynch mob of 1500 students.

We're proud to be the editors of O*YAD 1992, not because it's the best-looking yearbook ever produced, but because of the friendships formed and the times we had.

Spring Supplement: "Better late than never!"

Jon-Michael Marconi
DESIGN AND LAYOUT EDITOR

Students gathered in front of the distribution stands, some were overwhelmed by the sight of the Spring Supplement that they thought could never be. From kissing to kneeling and bowing, students demonstrated their happiness to the yearbook staff members who were willing to take monetary donations from any student who demonstrated a desire to do so.

The staff toasted (with Diet Coke®) to celebrate the completion of a nagging problem. Michelle says, "If it wasn't for the Supplement, I think that we would have met some of our other deadlines, namely those of the Yearbook itself."

The Supplement is something that we'd all like to forget, but it signifies a deep bond in the Yearbook staff. We learned how to work together toward a common goal. Timeliness isn't this staff's greatest asset, but friendships formed will last a lifetime.

Anyway, don't you think that the Spring Supplement should come out in the spring?

Supplement distress in O*YAD

Andrea Halpern tries to figure out which page of the supplement she wants. Luckily, she finally did!
